Nats Thump Tigers, 6-2, On 3-Hitter By Marrero

Eddie Yost Bangs 2-Run Home Run; Mele Slams One With Two on Base

By Shirley Povich

Post Reporter

Detroit, May 21.—Conrado Marrero surveyed Briggs Stadium for the first time in his life today and noted the 33,320 fans in the well-stocked grandstands. To the Nats on the bench, he said: "Mucho people. Me peetch."

Two and a half hours later, the Nats' little Cuban comrade could have added: "Mucho peetch," because he threw a three-hitter into the faces of the bewildered Tigers and beat 'em 6-2, pushing the Nats into third place.

Of undetermined age, but popularly supposed to be about 33, chunky Chico barely missed a shut-out when Aaron Robinson, with the Tigers' last hit of the day, pumped a seventh-inning homer into the right field seats.

But by that time, the Nats' had exhibited some home-run talents of their own to give Marrero a formidable 6-0 lead. Eddie Yost batted two runs home in the second inning with a swat into the Cleveland, May 21.—A crowd of 79,570 watched Joe DiMaggio slam two home runs, one with the bases loaded, and drive in six runs, as the New York Yankees beat the Cleveland Indians, 14-4, and 12-4, today. The double victory stretched the champions' American League lead to 2½ games. See Page 13 for details.

Left field seats. And two innings later, Sam Mele batted one into the same sector that was good for three runs.

It was Marrero, though, who dominated the contest, outlasting three Detroit pitchers, Ted Gray, Paul Calvert and Dizzy Trout. He didn't give up any kind of a hit until the fourth inning and in his one trouble spot he beat the Tigers back by sheer magnificence.

That was the fourth inning when his 3-0 lead was in jeopardy after Merrill Combs booted Priddy's ground ball and Kell singled to right to put Tigers on first and third with none out. The fat end of the Detroit batting order was coming up, too.

Marrero was in a 3-and-2 spot with Vic Wertz in this crisis when, completely unperturbed, he curve-balled Wertz for strike three. It upset the Tigers' plans completely. Kell was running on the strike-out pitch, and the Nats turned it into a double play, finally nipping Priddy at the plate.

Chico walked three Tigers, but he struck out four of 'em. He was showing 'em a tantalizing curve

Summer Bookings Are Canceled by Margaret Truman

Los Angeles, May 21 (AP).—James Davidson, head of the New York agency that handles Margaret Truman's concert appearances, today said that Miss Truman will not sing this summer.

The President's daughter has requested cancellation of her July engagements at the Robin Hood Dell, Philadelphia, and at the Lewisohn Stadium in New York, Davidson said. He added that she plans no concert booking until October.

Davidson wouldn't say why, though. "It's a personal matter over which we have no control," he explained, "and I don't feel qualified to discuss it."

Red-Haired Billy Gets Rare Chance to See Red-Breasted Robin Bring Up Her Family

MAMA ROBIN FEEDS HER LITTLE ONES, AS SEEN BY BILLY FROM HIS ROOM

By Sam Zagoria

Post Reporter

Billy David has a one-in-a-million opportunity to study ornithology and he's making the most of it.

A robin family has taken up housekeeping right on his bedroom windowsill, and red-haired Billy is rapidly becoming an authority on the life and habits of the red-breasted bird.

The robins couldn't have found a better welcome. For years, 13-year-old Billy has been reading nature books, encyclopedias, and Government pamphlets on animals.

The interest in such books and others has paid off. Freckle-faced Billy has been an honor student at St. Matthew's Cathedral School all year long.

His current study started five weeks ago when Mrs. Robin singled out his window-ledge of the similar hundreds in the apartment development as just the spot for her nest. Billy was thrilled from the first.

Since then, the activities of the robins are his interest "from the first thing in the morning until the last thing at night," according to his father, a Pentagon employee.

Billy and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. David, asked their address not be listed since the Robin family has proved aversive

Job Efficiency Cited in Rise of U.S. Idleness

New Machines Boost Output Per Employee, Reserve Board Says

By The Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday said increased output per worker has been one cause of rising unemployment since last summer.

The higher average has meant more total production without a corresponding rise in workers' numbers, the Federal Reserve Bulletin for May observed.

Increased installation of "new machinery and equipment of highly efficient design" and more efficient management of working staffs has helped in lifting output averages, the publication said.

The result was seen in mounting unemployment as the growth in population brought a growth in the number of job seekers.

The Federal Reserve analysis of "labor market developments" pointed to these influences at work on the part of business management:

1. "Large profits and strong financial position in recent years (which) have encouraged business to spend record amounts for new machinery and equipment of highly efficient design."

2. "Intensified competitive pressure on management to reduce costs, partly by curtailing employment and by utilizing those employed more efficiently than earlier in the postwar period."

In addition to the effects of rising population in raising the number of job seekers, the board said, there has been an "increased tendency for married women to work out of the home," and a similar trend among teen-agers.

It said that "prospects for the next several months appear good for continued high levels of economic activity." However, it added: "During the summer, unemployment is likely to increase again owing to seasonal influences."

"Graduating classes this year will be exceptionally large and, unless employment opportunities continue to expand, many new entrants into the labor market will have more difficulty obtaining jobs than in most other postwar years."

Behind Freedom Fair Fuss District's Apathy to Sesqui Laid to Number of Reasons

By Thomas Winship

Post Reporter

Freedom Fair is on the ropes and may be due for the knockout punch when the full Sesquicentennial Commission meets in the next two weeks.

A sudden show of city-wide civic and business support is the only hope of salvaging the much-talked-about 150th anniversary exposition.

Wednesday night at 8 o'clock the Federation of Businessmen's Associations will sponsor a mass meeting in the District Building board room in a last-ditch effort to produce that enthusiasm.

The Fair got off to an auspicious start on April 15, 1949. It was unveiled at the White House. President Truman gave his blessings and was even credited with authoring the Fair's name.

Last Thursday—13 months later—the President told his press conference the people of Washington do not seem to want a Freedom Fair. What's more, he said, he wouldn't be surprised if it never came off.

The envisioned Fair and concessions center, aimed to show 150 years' achievement of American industry and labor, was slated to open July 1, 1950 for a two-year run, then put off until 1951.

What happened? What made the Fair's temperature nosedive? Sesqui officials, citizen, and business leaders and the man on the street rattle off a string of factors contributing to the apparent collapse.

None will state flatly that any one circumstance was the sole fly in the ointment. It was a combination of factors, they agree. Talks See SESQUI, Page 9, Column 3

D.C. Tourists Awed by Beauty Of Florence, Assisi Shrines

Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, public relations assistant at the Hamilton National Bank, is hostess for 240 Washington Archdiocesan Holy Year pilgrims to Rome. She is reporting to The Washington Post from time to time on the pilgrimage. The following letter reports on visits to Florence, Venice and Milan. The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, who led the pilgrimage, returned to the District Saturday.

En Route to Florence, May 11.

Dear Reader:

After four short but precious days in the center of Christendom, we left, by bus, for the great center of Florence, or Firenze, as the Italians call it. Giuseppe, the head waiter at the Boston Hotel, who had been very nice to us, was on hand to wave goodbye at 8 a. m. Every once in a while I think I should mention the weather, and it has been perfect—blue, sunny skies.

We had four buses making the trip of 144 miles into the center of Italy, and some of the nice folks on our bus who helped to make the trip pleasant and congenial were Rosemary Mancini, Shirley Kern, Gertrude Thomas and Dorothy Ryan sisters, Velma and Dorothy Ryan, who were with us moving baritone voice (I say moving because the bus was bouncing him up and down) started us harmonizing on many old songs, which whiled away some of the 13 hours it took to make the trip.

We went through beautiful, verdant, productive farm land, along the Via Flaminia. The mountains were high, with many tight hair-pin turns. When we stopped at Assisi for a nice lunch, it was amazing to find comfortable accommodations in a little village tucked away in the mountains. We were eager to see the Franciscan Church wherein is the tomb of the saint who made Assisi famous, St. Francis. We also visited the nearby Church of St. Mary of the Angels, which is closely associated with the life of the saint; and the tomb of St. Clare in the church of the same name.

As we were riding through the lovely Italian countryside, in the dusk of a spring evening, we said our rosary together in thanksgiving and in petition.

We finally arrived in Florence at 10 p. m., to stay at the Hotel See PILGRIMS, Page 7, Column 3

Policeman's Wife Freed By Kidnapers

Abduction in Nude From Bedroom in Oklahoma City Laid To Revenge Seeker

BULLETIN

Oklahoma City, May 21 (AP).—Mrs. Jo Alice Raper, 23, kidnaped wife of a police vice squad officer, was released unharmed by her abductors late tonight at a suburban filling station.

Mrs. Raper said she was kidnaped from her home by two men, about 43 and 29 years old. She was not molested but was held captive in a room somewhere in Oklahoma City all day, she said.

Oklahoma City, May 21 (AP). A kidnaper overpowered the pretty wife of a police vice squad officer in her bedroom early today and carried her away in the nude to get revenge on her husband.

Lieut. Wayne Harbolt of the police homicide squad said no trace had been found late today of Mrs. Jo Alice Raper, 23.

Harbolt said her husband, Officer C. V. Raper, received a telephone call this afternoon and heard his wife screaming. The caller hung up before the call could be traced.

Officer Raper told fellow policemen he had received several threatening telephone calls last week. They were followed by a note which said in part:

"Get this straight and stay out of my business or that woman will have to take your punishment."

The officer is assigned to the police gambling detail.

Raper said he found his wife gone when he came home from duty at 2 a. m. He had talked with her at 11:30 p. m. Saturday by telephone.

Raper said everything in the first-floor bedroom was in disorder. He added his wife's tattered nightgown lay in the middle of the floor but none of her clothes was gone from the closet.

The telephone was off the hook, lying on the floor.

Outside, a 12-foot ladder was leaning against a second-story window where the screen was cut. Raper said he found this note in the bedroom:

"How do you like this Mr. Raper. Is afraid?"

Police Chief L. J. Hilbert said special police squads are combing Oklahoma City for the kidnaper. Hilbert said he believed the kidnaper is an illiterate maniac.

After the abduction the husband showed the threatening note received last week to detectives. It read:

"Vernon."

"You have a pretty wife, tall, slim and attractive to any man. Just what any man would go for and I am sure you would hate for something to happen to her. But it is the only chance to get even with you so let this be a warning. Get this straight and stay out of my business or that woman will have to take your punishment. This isn't a threat, it is just a warning. You know exactly what we are talking about—A Friend."

The note was crudely written. Raper said, "I can't think of anyone who would do such a deed. I don't know where to start the investigation."

The officer said his wife kept a shotgun loaded at her bedside and had fired at prowlers several nights ago.

'Our Goal Must Be All Europe, Not Just Part,' RAF Marshal Asserts

By John G. Norris

Central Europe as well as western Europe must be made secure against Communist attack, Britain's Lord Tedder said yesterday.

"I don't agree with people who say we must defend just to the Rhine," said the marshal of the Royal Air Force. "Our goal must be Europe, not just a part of it. If we are to win the cold war, it must be won psychologically and morally. Germany and even the satellites can and must be brought within the democratic ranks."

Assignment of the five-star RAF officer to serve with Gen. Omar Bradley and France's Lieut. Gen. Paul Ely on the Mutual Defense Assistance Pact military standing group augurs well for the success of the important staff body. Winds Drive Red Ships to Shelter In Maneuver Area

London, May 21 (AP).—Strong winds and heavy seas drove a fleet of 31 Russian vessels to shelter tonight half a mile off England's southwest coast within easy sailing distance of Monday's British, Dutch, and French naval maneuvers.

Nine British warships steamed toward the Bay of Biscay for the maneuvers. A short time later the Russian vessels followed in the general direction. But tonight they nestled in Mounts Bay near Lands End.

Official British naval quarters said there was no special significance to the appearance of the Soviet vessels, but they admitted every move of the Red fishing fleet was being reported to Royal Naval Headquarters.

He said it would "cost far more to fight a third world war. For that reason, he added, the United States must maintain its peacetime armed forces at an unprecedented 1,500,000 men."

"The war is over, but the duration may have just started," Barkley said. "We are committed to a policy that we ourselves cannot be secure if the rest of the world is insecure."

He said the United States is helping other nations get to their feet through the Marshall Plan and other forms of aid.

"We ask no reward except that we be allowed to live in peace without fear, suspicion and underground movements," Barkley said. But he added, "We cannot afford to take the chance that our cities will be destroyed by this juggernaut that has run around the world."

Death Toll Put at 27

South Amboy Munitions Cargo Was Being Shipped to Pakistan

South Amboy, N. J., May 21 (AP). The death toll in the South Amboy munitions disaster was fixed officially today at 27, and banded survivors gathered outside patched-up churches to give thanks there were no more deaths.

The bodies of only four of the 27 have been recovered. The rest disappeared in the funnel of flame and black smoke which roared into the sky as 600 tons of munitions blew up at South Amboy last Friday night.

Churches held special services to mourn the dead and to give thanks to God that the toll was not higher.

Meanwhile, Coast Guard head-

Cuzco, Peru, Once Capital of Incas, Is Scene of Panic; Death Toll May Rise

Cuzco, Peru, May 21 (AP).

A violent earthquake rocked this ancient Inca capital today, leveling entire districts and leaving hardly a building unscarred.

The first official count said 50 dead had been recovered from the rubble and at least 250 persons were known to have been injured.

Rescue workers combed the ruins by torchlight for bodies of "many more" victims feared still buried.

It was the most violent quake in the memory of the fear-stricken citizens of this 800-year-old city, once the capital of the vast Inca Indian empire and the first capital of modern Peru.

Fires broke out in various sections immediately following the quake which lasted but four to six seconds.

Survivors Sleep in Open

The surviving citizens of this city of 50,000 were spending the night in plazas and open fields, fearful that another tremor might send weakened structures crashing down on them.

Relief stations operated on the corners of its narrow cobblestoned streets with hastily rigged emergency lighting.

Hospitals were packed with the injured, as soldier and civilian rescuers continued to bring in cases. The tremor toppled many historic buildings into the streets of Cuzco. All the city's scores of churches—some of which had withstood the severe earthquake of 1650—suffered damage.

Modern Hotel Little Hurt

The building damaged the least was the modern four-story Hotel Cuzco, which was filled with foreign tourists who were sitting down to lunch when the quake struck. Some of its walls cracked but none of the guests was hurt.

Prado avenue, site of some of Cuzco's most modern and finest homes, was completely leveled, and the entire suburb of San Sebastian was wiped out.

Casualties probably would have been higher but 15,000 persons were at a football game when the quake started. None was hurt.

The quake struck at 1:35 p. m. It lasted only a few seconds, but it was strong enough to topple structures which had stood for centuries, sending up a great cloud of dust which still filled the mountain air hours later.

20 Percent of City Wrecked

Panicky survivors stumbled through the rubble-strewn streets, hampering rescue workers trying to dig the dead and wounded out of the ruins.

Officials estimated that 20 per-

Priest Criticizes Sen. Chavez for Attack on Budenz

New York, May 21 (AP).—A Roman Catholic pastor today criticized Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.) for "attacking the integrity of the conversion" of former Communist Louis Budenz.

The Rev. Edward Lodge Curran, pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Brooklyn, addressed 500 members of the Catholic Guild of Western Union Telegraph Co. employees at their thirteenth annual communion breakfast.

"Senator Chavez, instead of attacking the integrity and honesty of the conversion of Budenz, should be down in Washington working to remove the Communists put in positions of trust in our Government by his political party," Father Curran said.

Chavez, he added, "is more interested in his own political party than in routing the Reds from Washington."

The Senator recently charged that Budenz, former managing editor of the Communist Daily Worker and now a member of the Fordham University faculty, used the Catholic Church as "a cloak and shield" to protect himself in "giving un-American, un-Christian dubious testimony."

Father Curran also defended Senator Joseph McCarthy (R., Wis.) in connection with McCarthy's charges of Communist infiltration into the State Department.

Bielaski Tells Of Amerasia Mystery Man

New York, May 21 (AP).—Former OSS executive Frank Bielaski said today there is a person involved in the Amerasia case "of greater fame" than anyone previously mentioned.

But so far, he said, the man hasn't even been investigated. Bielaski, who testified secretly early this month before the Senate subcommittee investigating alleged Communist influence in the Senate Department, was questioned on the National Broadcasting Co.'s "Meet the Press."

The former director of investigation for the Office of Strategic Services made the original raid on the offices of the magazine Amerasia.

Later FBI raids led to arrest of six persons, indictment of three, and conviction of two on charges of conspiracy to illegally remove Government documents.

Bielaski said on the broadcast that documents he saw during the first Amerasia raid were from Government departments but most of them showed they had come through the State Department.

He was asked if all the persons involved had been mentioned. "Oh, no," said Bielaski. "Of my own knowledge there is one individual involved in this case right up to his ears, and his name has never been mentioned."

"He is a person, I think, of greater fame, shall I say, nationally and internationally than anyone who has been mentioned in this case."

"Has he been called by any of the committees?" Bielaski was asked.

"He has never been called by anybody," he replied, "nor do I think his connection with the case has ever been investigated."

The former OSS man said he could not name the man because it "might interfere with an investigation which the Senate Committee may make."

"Is he in the Government?" he was asked.

"No," was his reply, "he is not in the Government."

"Was he in the Government?" Bielaski first turned aside that question, but later commented that "he is not known as a Government man particularly."

Bielaski said latent fingerprints found on the Amerasia documents were "extremely interesting" but were never used as evidence before the grand jury. He didn't connect the fingerprints with the mystery person.

"Some of the fingerprints . . . furnished evidence of a prima facie case of perjury which has never been prosecuted by the Department of Justice," he added.

He said he believed Amerasia could have had "every document from the State Department that concerned the Near East going through their organization."

Senate Probers Asked To Rule on Lattimore

Baltimore, May 21 (AP).—A group of Johns Hopkins University professors today called on the Senate subcommittee investigating charges against Owen Lattimore to "make a definite pronouncement on the truth or falsity" of the charges.

The action was urged in a resolution unanimously adopted by the Johns Hopkins Chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

It sent a copy of the resolution to Senator Tydings (D., Md.) chairman of the Foreign Relations Subcommittee.

Total Assets of U. S. Banks Reported at All-Time High

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation reported yesterday that bank assets reached "an all-time peak" at the start of this year.

A four-billion-dollar increase during last year put the total up to 180 billion dollars, topping the previous record of December, 1945, by two billion dollars, FDIC Chairman Maple T. Harl said.

The report covered the standing of the Nation's 14,736 banks. "Loans reached a new high of nearly 50 billion dollars," it said, with a decline in loans to business.

Deposits also increased 30 billion dollars during the year to a total of 165 billion dollars at the close of 1949.

Capital invested in banks grew faster than assets, so that the banks ended 1949 with $7.30 in capital for each $100 in assets compared with $7.10 a year earlier.

Harl called it a "record of new accomplishments" attesting "the soundness of the dual (State and National) banking system which is the life blood of the American free enterprise economy."

"We are now entering the seventh year since any depositor has suffered a loss from the failure of an (FDIC) insured bank," he commented.

British Labor Party's Policy Believed Moderated at Parley

London, May 21 (NYHT).—The secret weekend conference of Britain's leading Laborites ended late today and it is generally believed that victory went to the moderates of the Labor Party.

The conference, attended by Prime Minister Clement Attlee and most of his Ministers and representatives of the Labor Party organization, the trade unions and the Cooperative Union, assembled Friday night. Its aim was to map in broad outline the party's platform for the next general election, expected this fall.

The conference is believed to have agreed almost unanimously that Labor must present the electorate with a platform free of proposals for larger doses of socialism and more nationalization.

Some political observers believe the discussions may result in a re-born Labor Party—a party more truly Labor than Socialist. Some Laborites already are applying the word "progressive" to party aims and policies.

Party statisticians were at the conference and their job was to prove to the leftist elements that the February election results meant the British voters wanted less socialism and not more.

It is reported the party firebrands led by Minister of Health Aneurin Bevan took little convincing and agreed to go along with the majority.

Both are career diplomats of long experience. They will have to draw upon all of their experience in overcoming the many problems that have arisen in the three years of dissension between the two countries.

Belgrade and Athens to Exchange Diplomats

Belgrade, May 21 (AP).—Yugoslavia and Greece—unfriendly neighbors for many months—today established a more amiable relationship, which may ease the tension in the Balkans.

It came through a formal exchange of diplomats. Yugoslavia picked Serif Schovic to represent this nation at Athens. Greece appointed Demetr Pappas as Minister to Belgrade.

The action reflected in particular Yugoslavia's resentment against the Kremlin-led Cominform's anti-Tito activities. It stemmed directly from Yugoslavia's charge that it was sold out by the Russians in the Greek civil war in an effort to "get" Premier Marshal Tito.

(Yugoslavia, along with Albania and Bulgaria, were accused by United Nations investigators of supplying, training and helping the Communist guerillas in the Greek war, which ended last October.)

The decision to exchange ministers should help to solve—at least in part—a number of problems that have international interest as well as mutual Greek-Yugoslavia concern. These include:

1. Increased trade between the two countries.

2. Possible joint use of Salonika as a free port.

3. A speedup in the return of approximately 10,000 child refugees now in Yugoslavia, as alleged homeless victims of the Greek civil war.

4. An example that a Communist nation, at least one led by Tito, can get along with a country of a different political philosophy.

5. Resumption of rail connections between the two countries.

West Berlin's 'Iron' Measures Reported Scaring Marchers

Berlin, May 21 (P).—A Communist Free German Youth official, who described himself as a deserter, today said iron measures of the West have scared off many from the proposed march on Berlin next weekend.

He said only about 250,000—not the 500,000 the leaders have boasted would participate in the Whitenside rally—will show up. Many East zone parents—disturbed by Western counter-propaganda—won't let their children attend, he added, and only about 6000 young propagandists actually have been assigned to the task of filtering into West Berlin.

The anti-Communist newspaper Telegraf gave full credence to his story, though the possibility remained his account was intended to plant a false feeling of security among Westerners. The official who said he was a member of the central committee of Communist youth, was not named.

According to the fugitive, most of the demonstrators will be under strict discipline to keep them on their own side of the East Sector boundary.

Most of those assigned to infiltrate into the Western sectors "will stand on the Soviet-Allied boundary, cheer passing columns, sing songs and seek to join the marchers as pseudo-West-Berliners," he asserted.

Some will attempt to make with the importance of agreement on it during his recent trip.

3. Since devaluation, Britain has been a creditor to the continent, not a trade debtor. It can look forward to a continuance of this situation. Accordingly, its risk of losing reserves under the payments scheme is minimized, if not indeed reversed. It now stands, in fact, to earn some gold and dollars from other countries through the clearing arrangements.

ECA is hopeful that assurances can be made to permit all the Marshall Plan countries to reach agreement before July 1, when a present, less effective and less desirable payments arrangement expires.

Some question has been raised about the effect of the plan on the European nation's drive for dollar exports. It has been argued that the payments plan, stimulating intra-European trade, will lead the Western European nations to take in too much of each others' washing and cause them to diminish their efforts to export to the Western Hemisphere to earn the dollars they need.

The answer to this argument, however, is that the plan will introduce a much greater degree of competition among the European traders. The consequence should be lower prices, more efficiency and higher quality. And it is these factors, more than anything else, that will permit Europeans to produce goods that can compete in world—and American dollar—markets.

If agreement on the European Payments Union can be firmed up enough this week for ECA Chief Paul G. Hoffman to announce it, the favorable effect on Congress should be considerable. Congress has been sold on the idea, as one of the most tangible and effective possible steps for European economic unity and recovery.

AA Rocket Is Effective 12 Miles Up

New York, May 21 (P).—Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, today said the Army has a new antiaircraft rocket that will fire 12 miles in the air.

The rocket, called the "Loki," will be "capable of destroying attacking planes," General Collins said in a radio interview.

He said the new weapon still was in the testing stage. He pointed out that Loki was the god of Norse mythology who was supposed to release the hosts of Hades and added:

"That's exactly what we intend to do if anyone ever attacks the United States."

He did not reveal further details of the new weapon.

Collins said "we faced a very critical problem" when it was discovered "the police states had us outnumbered in tanks by more than 7 to 1."

"Now, however," he said, "we are working up new antitank weapons that are relatively inexpensive, that are light and maneuverable and easy to manufacture, and which we believe will go a long way toward overcoming this great advantage that the other fellow now has on us."

Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson, interviewed on the same program, said unification of the armed service "is here, it's working, and the next year will be a lot easier than the year just behind us."

Truman Stirs War Hysteria, Pravda Says

Moscow, May 21 (P).—Pravda accused President Truman today of trying to incite new war hysteria in the United States celebration yesterday of Armed Forces Day.

"The military clique tried to use the day as a new cause for inciting war hysteria in the arms race," said Pravda, organ of the Communist Party. "The signal was given by President Truman."

The President, in a Washington address, gave cynical praise, said Pravda, to atomic weapons, declaring that atomic bombs are means of securing peace. The paper also struck out at Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, whom it quoted as saying in a San Francisco speech that the American people ought to tighten their belts and get down to defense work.

"Obviously," said Pravda, "it is not enough that the budget earmarks 76 percent in preparation for aggressive war."

(Pravda's editorial writer gave no hint as to how he arrived at the 76 percent figure. The budget submitted by President Truman on January 9 called for military expenditures of about $13,500,000,000 in a total budget of $42,400,000,000. (Russia's most recent budget called for military expenditure of about 15 billion dollars for military purposes in a total expenditure of about 78 billion dollars.)

Civil Liberties Union Protests AEC Gag Rule

The American Civil Liberties Union yesterday urged the Atomic Energy Commission to relax its censorship rules so the Nation can obtain "needed information on the H-bomb."

The organization objected particularly to an order prohibiting AEC employees, contractors and consultants from discussing technical information on thremonuclear weapons even if the data is unclassified.

In a letter to the commission, three Civil Liberties Union officials pointed out that many AEC consultants are among the Nation's foremost scientists. Thus, the letter said, the gag rule deprives the public of expert opinions on the "most important issue confronting the Nation today."

To silence these men in their discussions of nonsecret material is to deprive the public of information it must have if it is to form a sound judgment on what should be done in regard to the H-bomb, and tentative effect to its judgment through appropriate legislative and administrative channels," the letter said.

It was signed by Dr. John Haynes Holmes, chairman; Patrick Murphy Malin, director, and Arthur Garfield Hays, general counsel.

To solve the problem, they suggested that the AEC permit its consultants to discuss nonsecret information as long as they speak as individuals rather than as representatives of the AEC.

The benefits that would follow from such discussions, the letter said, "are so substantial as to make imperative a modification of the present policy."

Fewer Curbs On Foreign Trade Seen

Gamille Gutt, chairman of the International Monetary Fund, reported yesterday that the job of ending foreign exchange restrictions may be easier in the future.

In a letter accompanying the fund's first report in three years to its members and governors on exchange restrictions, he said progress to date "has not been as conspicuous as I would like to report."

But "if trends of improvement continue, members should find the task less difficult in the future."

The report traced the rise and spread of trade and exchange restrictions to the first and second World War and the intervening depression, all of which disrupted production and distribution.

Thereafter, it was pointed out, each nation sought benefit for itself through restrictions which now are hard to eliminate.

"More rapid and consistent improvement would be possible," the report said, if member countries would formulate internal fiscal policies with the objectives of the fund more clearly in mind and worked in closer international harmony.

Draft Act Must Be Extended For Emergency, Tydings Says

Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said yesterday he thinks Congress has "no option" but to extend the present draft act "so as to keep the country in a state of readiness for any possible emergency."

The House is due to act shortly, possibly this week, on a two-year extension of the act which expires June 24. Under the bill, there would be no inductions unless Congress later gave the word.

The Senate Armed Services Committee, which Tydings heads, has not yet held hearings. But Marylander said in a broadcast over WBAL, Baltimore, that he will schedule hearings shortly.

No men have been inducted under the present act since early last year, but Tydings said he believes the act should be extended to keep the Selective Service machinery and records intact. He added: "If we extend the Draft Act, it would simply be in suspended animation, more or less. It would not be used and everything would be just as it is today."

Tydings also said he regards as essential to national security an extension of the Synthetic Rubber Act, due to expire June 30.

Under that law, the Government has kept operating the synthetic rubber plants built during wartime and has required that certain amounts of this rubber be used along with raw or natural rubber.

He said that even the speculation that Congress may not renew the act has forced up the prices of rubber products because there is a world shortage of raw rubber.

Push Cold War Front to East, Tedder Urges

American military men. Some observers have forecast the standing group may emerge as new "Combined Chiefs of Staff," such as we had during the war.

Whether the western world can rearm sufficiently to forestall or stand off a Russian attack by the time the USSR has a stockpile of atomic bombs depends largely on a stronger France and American aid, Tedder believes.

But he indicated that the "announcements of the past few days"—apparently meaning the formation of a permanent council to speed the settlement of political, financial and military problems under MDAP and the Schuman proposals regarding Germany—made him optimistic.

"What are the chances of getting Europe rearmed before the Soviets get enough A-bombs so they might feel they could attack and win," the British airman was asked.

"That's much more of a financial and economic problem than a military one," he replied. "But the recent announcements are the most hopeful signs I have seen."

Asked About Costs
Can it be done with American military aid continuing at the present billion-dollar-a-year level?

"That's another hard question," said Tedder. "A great deal depends upon how much more can be achieved by combining the efforts of the European nations. Under the present circumstances, I feel that the United Kingdom cannot do more than it is at present."

Britain's ranking airman said he considered his country's work in getting Western Union started its greatest contribution yet to the common cause.

Western Union—the earlier military association of Britain, France and the Benelux countries—worked out the strategic and military problems involved in the defense of Western Europe and the equipment needed to make it possible, he said.

British transfers of Vampire jet fighters to France, Belgium and Holland have speeded up the unification of the air defense forces of Western Europe to the point where this phase of the common defense is further along than other fields, said Tedder.

"Perhaps largely due to the fact that many of their airmen were in RAF uniforms during the war, the French, Dutch and Belgian air forces now are linked very, very closely with ours in training, tactics and operations," he added.

Concentrated on Defense
The three continental air forces have concentrated almost entirely on air defense fighters, capable of being used both as interceptors and for tactical support of ground troops, he declared. This was the "most pressing problem" in the air field and the one most easily solved, Tedder went on.

Britain, however, is planning on a "balanced" air force, and is now expanding its bomber command—both strategic and tactical. Such bombers are essential to "win the air battle" for control of the skies over the battlefield, he stated.

RAF strategic bombers, however, will differ from America's B-36s, in that they have shorter range and can be used both against enemy home targets and in support of land and sea operations.

"In 1945 we took a gamble and decided to try to develop something completely new rather than build more advanced types based on World War II bombers for protection in the interim," declared the RAF marshal.

"The first of the new generation is the Canberra jet bomber, and it looks very good."

Performance figures on the twin jet Canberra and the new Venom fighter—a later version of the Vampire—remain classified, but are "quite fantastic," said Tedder. They can operate from much shorter fields than had been expected, including "some strips in the mountains," he explained.

Transfer to Fill Gap
The Canberra is between our conventionally designed North American B-45 jet bomber—the only model in service—and the swept-back wing Boeing B-27 in the jet bomber field, as to design and performance, it was said.

Transfer of 70 American Boeing B-29 piston bombers to the RAF under the military aid program will "help fill in the gap" between Britain's wartime bombers and the jets coming along, said Tedder.

France, he declared, is going into production with the British Vampire, but has a "promising" experimental jet fighter of her own that is a "step ahead" of the Vampire.

Development of the French fighter will not interfere with the practical aim of standardization of air defenses of Western Europe, Tedder said. One or two different fighter types are all right, as long as there is standardization of weapons, ammunition, communications and operational techniques.

Just as the wartime Spitfires were lighter and more maneuverable—but with shorter range—than our P-47s and P-51s, so the new British jet fighters differ from our postwar aircraft. Tedder said he has insisted on keeping their weight down, to give the RAF "more flexibility."

Standardization of land weapons also is going along "extremely well" under the mutual defense agreement, both as to European countries and with the United States, said the air marshal.

Tedder agrees wholeheartedly with his old associate—Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff—on the question of "national specialization" in armaments under the pact.

"We can't go on with the old basis of balanced forces within each nation," he said. "Each country must consent to concentrate on what is most urgent for them and what they can do best."

"Great Britain's most immediate problems are the threat from the air and the threat from the submarine. France's chief problems are threat from the air and from the ground. On the other hand, we cannot separate the land, sea and air threat."

"Does this mean that Britain will emphasize her air force and ant submarine protection and keep her army at present levels, as our military chiefs say we should do," Tedder was asked.

"We cannot maintain a large continental army, a strong air force including adequate ant submarine forces, plus a world-wide Navy," was his reply. "No nation can today. I doubt if even the United States can."

Everything at Steak!
By Albert Parthey Mesirou

UNLIKE Vegetarians appear to me to be a harmless lot, with a mild but cockeyed philosophy that is nevertheless quite sincere. Yet in their ranks are a few brains of undeniable magnitude. It puzzles me how the likes of George Bernard Shaw reconcile a Natural phenomenon with the Vegetarian theory that man is not a natural carnivore. How is it, then, that man can not only exist but thrive on a diet of beef alone? He cannot do this on milk or eggs, or any single vegetable, fruit or nut. Yet the human body grows strong and healthy on beef, and more importantly the appetite never tires of this delicious food. The breakfast steak is an American tradition, now unhappily in partial eclipse, but still popular in rural areas. A daily lunch of Parthey's Chopped Tenderloin Steak would never become tiresome. And a succulent, melt-in-the-mouth Parthey New York Sirloin or a tender, juice-filled Parthey Filet Mignon constitutes a dinner any normal human would welcome, night after night. But can you imagine a 3-times-a-day diet of spinach, or bananas or filberts? The mind revolts at the thought, and the stomach would turn hand-springs by the fourth day. No, Mr. Shaw, I enjoy your "Saint Joan" but you can have your dietary philosophy. It's not based on Natural fact, it's not logical . . . and it's no fun, either!

steaks! steaks! steaks!
Genial William J. Milleham, the Venetian blind tycoon, was an honored guest at our board recently. "I like your column," he said, "but I must confess that I find your superb steaks easier to digest!" Who am I to protest such opinion? After all, writing a column is only a sideline. Steaks are my career.

steaks! steaks! steaks!
When my Aunt Adeline rises to the defense of anything, she really rises, with a majesty reminiscent of the volcano that recently up-ended a Mexican's farm. So, when a bone-dry acquaintance last week tsk-tsked at her for my fashionable comments on alcohol, Aunt Adeline let the unfortunate lady have it. In eight or nine thousand well chosen words, Aunt Adeline dwelt on the relaxing qualities of the before-meal cocktail, the effervescent delight of a sparkling glass of champagne and the soothing spiritual and physical effects of a leisurely brandy after dinner still indignant. Aunt Adeline reported the incident to me in detail over long-distance phone. "The nerve of that woman!" she harrumphed. "For all the 40 years she's preached against alcohol, she's taken 6 wine-glasses daily of a 'tonic' that's 45 percent neutral grain spirits. The old fool has been walking on clouds for the best part of her life without knowing what makes her feel so good!" I report this as a matter of incidental interest to those perplexed by the workings of the hinterland Prohibition mind, at its insular best in St. Louis.

steaks! steaks! steaks!
Despite the glamorous send-off given the new sub-species of Florida shrimp by the Saturday Evening Post this week, I am still of the opinion that the tenderest, most firmly-fleshed, best-tasting of these delightful crustaceans is the Jumbo Fantail, taken in the Gulf of Mexico. And that's the only kind we will serve at Parthey's until time proves me wrong. We get our shrimp from Gulf Central Sea Foods, Inc., Biloxi, Miss., and they're rushed to us, packed in ice, by fast express. We buy them green, or raw, and peel and vein them ourselves, slicing them down their backs, but leaving the huge fantail intact. Then our sea-food Chef, Norman Pressley, dips them in eggs beaten lightly and mixed with milk that has been mildly salted, and tenderly rolls them in the seasoned crumbs of fresh bread which has been thoroughly dried in our own ovens. Unlike cracker meal or flour, bread crumbs, as every educated chef knows, do not absorb fat, and consequently never form the deceptive crust that looks so beautiful, but often turns out to be a soggy mass underneath! In deep-frying Parthey's shrimp, Chef Pressley uses only soy bean oil, an excellent all-protein food in itself, and delicately flavored. When our Jumbo Fantails reach a deep, golden brown, they are whisked onto a hot platter, surrounded with a wall of feather-light slivers of French fried potatoes and served to you with a container of Salad Chef Wilbur Smith's own delectable tartar sauce. A generous portion of cole slaw, the famous Parthey roll basket with Swift's Brookfield butter, plus a beverage complete Parthey's Shrimp Platter; delicious beyond the dreams of the most demanding gourmet, yet at only one dollar thirty-five, well within the means of the casual luncher. Why not try it today? The address is 19th & K sts. nw.

Just a piece of rubber

That's all. It stretches—and snaps back again. But on that simple quality of elasticity our modern world is based—our automobiles, our trucks and buses, our planes, our telephones and electric appliances.

Natural Rubber Comes From Southeast Asia
Natural rubber from the milk of the rubber tree is a key raw material of modern living. Over 90% of all tree rubber comes from Southeast Asia—over a million tons a year. And the United States uses nearly half of it. Natural rubber is one of the few agricultural products that is selling today on a free market—unsubsidized, uncontrolled, and unrestricted.

Better Living For All Of Us
More natural rubber means better living for all of us—better tires, better cushioning, better roads, better hundreds of other products. And more natural rubber means better living for millions of people in Southeast Asia as well—people who are outside the Iron Curtain and who look to the United States as their principal market.

Wide Brannan Plan Support Reported

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Boosters for the Brannan Plan have been encouraged by the reports of observers of farm sentiment on the recent cross-country trip of President Truman.

Their encouragement doesn't spring from any indication of a widespread demand for the Brannan Plan and its proposal for production payments. It springs, instead, from the realization that the opposition hasn't an alternative. Rather, it has too many substitutes, and is agreed on nothing.

Observers say that dissatisfaction with the present farm law is the most definite sentiment to be found in the rural districts. Similar dissatisfaction was to be expected in cities, where the Anderson law acts to increase both prices and taxes.

Secondly, they found unexpected strength for the Brannan Plan among farmers, even among Farm Bureau members in spite of the bitter opposition of the bureau leadership. The realization is growing among bureau members that the federation's opposition to the Brannan Plan is a phase of the political feud raging between Farm Bureau President Allan B. Kline and Brannan. They consider it is a part of Kline's campaign to embarrass Brannan—along with the bureau's successful fight on Mr. Truman's plan for reorganization of the Agriculture Department and Kline's attempt to tie the Granger bill to divorce the Farm Bureau from the Extension Service to Brannan.

Wherever they found any understanding of the Brannan Plan in the cities, they found support for it among the persons who have to pay the grocery bills.

There is a political adage that "you can't beat something with nothing." That is encouraging the Administration farm group. They see Republicans in every farm State proposing a farm program. In some States they see Republicans coming up with more than one program. But they don't see them agreeing on anything but platitudes.

Republican Plans
Along this line, here are recent developments in the traditionally Republican corn belt:

1. An official subcommittee of the National Committee, appointed after the Sioux City farm meeting last September, came forth with a farm plan that the party is doing its best to forget. It is known as the Beck Plan, in honor of its author, Axel J. Beck, national committeeman from South Dakota. This plan, according to one Republican stalwart in the House, "out-Brannans Brannan."

2. A prominent South Dakota Republican emphasized the past week how anxious his party is to forget the Beck Plan. Representative Harold O. Love, who was State chairman while Beck was national committeeman, introduced an entirely different plan, named "The National Agricultural and Land Policy Act." The Love measure is a two-price system, which the author is sure will not cost anybody anything.

3. A Republican Farm Policy Committee in Iowa has proposed a wordy but progressive program. It is entirely different from a proposal by Republican Representative James I. Dooliver of Iowa a few weeks ago.

There are also farm proposals from Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (R., Mass.) and several other Senators, and a detailed suggestion by the National Grange for a two-price setup reminiscent of the McNary-Haugen bill vetoed twice by Republican Presidents in the 1920s.

Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) of the House Agriculture Committee recently protested against the Administration's activities for the Brannan Plan, particularly at the Democratic farm meeting in Des Moines last June. He indicated that that meeting had upset the bipartisan appeal.

Another GOP Dilemma
"We were about to get a trial of the Brannan Plan on potatoes and maybe some other items at that time," he said. "Republicans on the committee had been working nicely with us on farm legislation."

"Remember that price supports and nearly all other farm legislation was originally inspired by the Democrats. It was quite significant that we were getting such bipartisan support. Then came the Des Moines meeting with all its rowdy-dow. The next day our Republican members told me the show was off."

"The only chance left for a trial of the Brannan Plan was a strict party lineup, and it was a Democrat who led the fight against it." (The trial run was defeated with a substitute by Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.). It later became known as the Anderson Act.)

Since the incident that Cooley referred to, Republicans and anti-Administration Democrats have given support to every effort to trim Brannan's authority. They

N. C. Premiere

Town Is Host To Bigwigs For Movie

Nashville, N. C. (1500 population, in the center of the tobacco country) is going to get a lot of thrills today.

Sometime in the afternoon the first passenger train in 30 years will puff into the town on the spur freight line of the Atlantic Coast Line that connects Nashville with Rocky Mount, 10 miles away.

It will bring more than 200 visitors, including 100 members of Congress, a score of Government officials, several dozen newsmen and other scattered celebrities and nonentities.

The visitors will be the guests of Dearborn Motors Corp. of Detroit, manufacturers of Ford tractors and Dearborn farm equipment. They will witness the world premiere of a technicolor motion picture, "Waves of Green," a tribute to the Nation's $2 land-grant colleges.

Nashville was chosen for the premiere because it is the home of Chairman Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.) of the House Agriculture Committee. Cooley has been an outstanding supporter of land-grant college work.

"We believe the picture will do a great deal toward focusing attention on what is right with American agriculture during these days when so much attention is at State land-grant colleges. It is given to what is wrong with agriculture," President Frank R. Pierce of Dearborn Motors said. Later the picture will be shown

The Board of Directors of Atlantic Coast Line Railroad Company on May 18, 1950 declared operative the Company's Modified Offer of Exchange, dated May 12, 1950, providing for the exchange of its First Consolidated Mortgage 4% Bonds, due July 1, 1952, for new General Mortgage 4% Bonds, Series A, due March 1, 1980 (bearing interest at the rate of 4½% per annum from March 1, 1950 to September 1, 1952). The creation of the new General Mortgage has been approved by the Company's stockholders, and the Board of Directors has approved the issuance of the Series A Bonds. The Modified Offer of Exchange is subject to authorization by the Interstate Commerce Commission of the issuance of the Series A Bonds.

As of May 18, 1950, assets had been received from over 600 bondholders with aggregate holdings in excess of $15,250,000 principal amount of First Consolidated Mortgage Bonds due 1952.

The Modified Offer of Exchange will remain open at least until the close of business on June 1, 1950, but may be terminated on that date or at any time thereafter.

Bondholders who have assented to the Offer and bondholders who now wish to accept the Offer are requested to forward their Bonds, accompanied by a Letter of Transmittal, to City Bank Farmers Trust Company, Agent, Corporate Trust Department, 22 William Street, New York 15, N. Y. The new General Mortgage Bonds, Series A, will be issued as promptly as possible after authorization by the Interstate Commerce Commission, whose decision in the matter is hoped for about May 31, 1950.

Copies of the Letter of Transmittal are available in two forms, one for use by bondholders who have already assented and the other incorporating an Assent which is for use by bondholders who have not yet accepted the Offer. Copies of these forms of the Letter of Transmittal and copies of the Modified Offer of Exchange may be obtained at the Office of the Company, 71 Broadway, New York 6, N. Y.; at City Bank Farmers Trust Company, Corporate Trust Department, 22 William Street, New York 15, N. Y.; and at Morgan Stanley & Co., 2 Wall Street, New York 5, N. Y.

School Plans Not Slowed by Annexing Suit

Fairfax County school officials have assured residents that annexation plans by the city of Falls Church won't interfere with the county's $12 million school building program.

The county school board formally stated that its decisions on selected new school sites will stand.

Officials said they felt the announcement was necessary because some residents have expressed doubt about schools planned for the area which Falls Church seeks to annex from Fairfax County.

The 12-million-dollar program depends on favorable action by the voters in a May 31 referendum on a $10,500,000 bond issue. Proceeds of the loan would be for school construction, additions and equipment.

At its meeting Thursday night the school board expressed willingness to "confer and continue on cooperate" with Falls Church on schools in the proposed annexation area. But the board pointed out in answer to a letter from Falls Church authorities that the board is committed under the proposed program to build schools at Graham rd., and in the Westlawn and Williston subdivisions. The Graham r. school is being built and sites are being acquired at the other two locations.

to public performances. Billy has done most of his observation through the slats of a Venetian blind.

It took Momma Robin 12 days to build the nest, Billy reported. "First she laid the inside circle, then kept building up from that. She coated the inside with mud and then laid a coating of grass over the mud to make it soft inside," Billy said.

She built well. The nest has withstood heavy rains and winds. Three weeks ago, "when I came from school, she was sitting on a robin's blue egg about a half-inch in diameter. On Tuesday there was another. On Wednesday another and on Thursday a fourth.

"Then for two weeks she just sat there—rain or shine. She kept turning the eggs over with her legs.

"Last Monday the first one hatched. Out came a little pink thing—sort of raw—with a very long neck. It had little pieces of down, which I guess will develop into feathers. The wing was encased in skin.

"On Tuesday there was another. On Wednesday a third, but the fourth hasn't hatched yet. I don't think it will. It's past due.

"The triplets have been named the Three Musketeers. If the fourth hatches, there will be some renaming, Billy promised. The parents are known, as might be expected, as Momma and Poppa.

"The mother has been feeding them little pieces of leaves and worms and sometimes Poppa brings some worms, too. They can't see yet, but they know the worms are there and stick their beaks up," Billy said.

Billy has talked about his progeny with an Interior Department expert and has been told the family will probably move on in a few weeks—a fact which he takes philosophically: "I've had them a month already."

The actual business of undertaking began as a natural adjunct to cabinet-making. Men such as Joseph Gawler, being skilled in fine craftsmanship, were called upon to undertake the making of wooden coffins (as they were then called).

Gradually more and more responsibility was placed on Joseph Gawler as a funeral director and this service to Washingtonians has been carried on with the same integrity by four generations of his family.

Archbishop O'Boyle Describes Pilgrimage

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

More than 1000 Catholics yesterday crowded into St. Matthew's Cathedral to hear the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, tell of his Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome.

Archbishop O'Boyle returned to Washington Saturday. He left the city on April 21 with 240 pilgrims from the archdiocese.

After the Mass, celebrated by the Rev. Thomas Lyons, the archbishop imparted the papal benediction upon the worshippers. He was empowered to give the benediction by Pope Pius XII as a mark of the Pope's affection for the people of the archdiocese.

Archbishop O'Boyle said that he hoped in the sermon, his first since returning, to "present some idea of how one is moved to the very depths of his soul by the visible expression of our glorious Catholic faith in Rome and in Lourdes."

At Rome, the pilgrims witnessed canonization rites for Blessed Anthony Mary Claret.

During the canonization, the archbishop said, he "prayed God that whatever tendency there might be to be lukewarm among our priests, religious or laity would be removed by a new-born faith and by acts of fervent charity toward Christ's poor and by daily dedication of our faithful to every thing which is the concern of the Church of God."

"In this day there is a tendency to be just a spectator... a hearer of the word and not a doer... to discuss and read about religion, but a lamentable failure to practice it," he said.

"Let us remember that the Saints and their deeds are given to us not only for our admiration but for our emulation..." the archbishop continued.

In his private audience with Pope Pius XII, the pontiff requested the archbishop to convey his "heartfelt gratitude" to the American people for their charity for the peoples of Europe and the Far East.

"We live in a world hoping and praying for peace," the archbishop said. "High and mighty leaders in Helvetia. We had a quick dinner and fell into bed. After a refreshing night's rest, we went to mass and Holy Communion at the Church of St. Anna, and then off for sightseeing at 9 a.m. We "did" the Medicean Chapels, the Cathedral of St. Mary of the Flowers, the Signoria Palace, the Church of St. Croce, and finally the famous Pitti Palace, with its magnificent art treasures. There are a number of other galleries, but, of course, you can't see them all in our limited time.

After siesta time, from 1 to 3 p.m., when everything closes, we went into the shopping district and world affairs, steeped in materialistic philosophy, not only have turned their back upon God, His commandments, and the timeless teachings of Christianity, but in their Lucifer-like pride have sought also to lead their fettered, enslaved peoples away from God..." he said.

"True and permanent peace will come to the world not through the violence of war, but through the violence each Christian does to the vices of pride, avarice, lust and injustice striving for mastery in his own soul," Archbishop O'Boyle declared.

some more of our lire rapidly disappeared. The Ryan girls and your correspondent had the opportunity of seeing a big, official looking Communist funeral, with red hammer and sickle flags and 6-foot floral pieces; also 1000 people following the casket, which was borne down the street on the shoulders of six men.

On Saturday morning we went off to Venice. We stopped in Bologna at the famous Al Pappagallo Ristaurante for lunch. The walls are covered with pictures like our Occidental Hotel and there is a parrot squawking up in the heavy beams of the ceiling. Next we visited a shrine containing the incorrupt body of St. Catherine of Ferrara. She died in the year 1400.

In the early afternoon we traveled through the fertile Pau Valley, across the Pau River to Padua, to visit the shrine containing the tomb of St. Anthony. The nearby souvenir store got some patronage from us and we saw Father Denges, pastor of the St. Stephen's Church, buying an attractive plaque of the Saint.

We reached Venice as the sun was going down and it was a perfect time for our first exciting gondola ride to our hotels. We saw the famous Bridge of Sighs and the Rialto Bridge. Then—imagine riding up to the hotel entrance in a boat! Some of the pilgrims in new by gondolas were Mr. and Mrs. James A. Farrell, Kitty Cissell, Eileen Bailey, Elizabeth Arnold, Mary O'Connell, and Mrs. Amelia Pomponio and her two daughters, Elvira and Mildred.

St. Mark's Square, with its beautiful church, its bell tower and is unique clock, is a sight to behold. The clock has above it two figures of men, nine feet high, who strike a huge bell with hammers at each hour. It has been in operation since 1400 without the need for any repairs.

Our guide, who took us through the magnificent Doge's Palace, told us we were only 85 miles from, shall we say, a valance of the Iron Curtain—Yugoslavia! We were also conducted through a glass factory and a lace factory. Outside the latter a small group of us had the good fortune to meet His Eminence, Cardinal Augustinelli, Patriarch of Venice, who was pleased to learn we were Americans and gave us his blessing.

On Sunday afternoon we went to the Lido, about 20 miles from Venice. In the early evening we went for a gondola ride on the Grand Canal, with lighted paper lanterns bobbing up and down and gondoliers serenading us.

Venice should be known not only as the Queen of the Adriatic, but also as the city of the bells. They are forever ringing throughout the city.

On Monday morning we set out for Milan and stopped in Verona for lunch. We saw Juliet's balcony and the square that the "Two Gentlemen" made famous.

We had to pass through Brescia, and Father John Tracy Ellis requested we be allowed to visit the tomb of St. Angela. When our driver got "slightly" lost, you should have seen the bearded monk who hopped on his bicycle and led the way through the narrow streets.

We arrived at Milan in the early evening, and as usual, were assigned to various hotels. The group that drew the Palace went to a sumptuous place opened only 20 days—nothing as gorgeous in the States. May Hickey was inviting friends, with an air of patronage, to use her bathroom and its sheet-sized Turkish towels! Our hotel, the Bristol Schmid, was only 700 yards from the spot where Mussolini and his companions were hanged in 1945.

Our first sightseeing stop was the Cathedral of Milan, the most beautiful of all we have seen, in the opinion of many. The stained glass windows alone, were breathtaking, not to mention the 126 spires, giving it a massive lace effect, and the gold statues atop each, reaching into the heavens. The Chapel of St. Maria delle Grazie contains a Vinci painting of "The Last Supper," and we marveled when we were told that bombing in the last war destroyed the wall on either side of the one on which the painting is and did not touch it. Nine thousand buildings in Milan were destroyed and there is still much reconstruction to be done.

On Tuesday evening some of us were lucky enough to get tickets for the La Scala Opera. Mozart's "The Magic Flute," was there. Velma and Dorothy Ryan and your correspondent were in the orchestra, with many of our friends in the six balconies. Others in the orchestra were Father Denges, Gertrude Thomas, Elizabeth Arnold, Mrs. James Palmer and her son John.

We left Italy for Switzerland on Wednesday morning and our impression of the various Italian cities we visited has been very good. The cleanliness of the streets has been remarked upon by many. Even in Vatican Square with its many thousands of people coming and going there was no paper litter as we see in America. If only we could all have a common language how much closer could our relationships become, through friendliness and understanding. We found courtesy and helpfulness everywhere.

Until we glimpse the snow-capped Alps, KATHRYN.

AEC Issues Book On Behavior of Dusts and Fumes

By The Associated Press

The Atomic Energy Commission last night announced publication of a 147-page book that it said summarizes present knowledge of the behavior of dusts, fumes and mists.

This "Handbook of Aerosols" was prepared, the commission said, to make the information readily available to persons concerned with the control of radioactive wastes at atomic energy installations.

AEC said the book contains some previously secret information compiled during the war by the National Defense Research Committee. It said these portions had been declassified at its request.

The United States Superintendent of Documents is selling the booklet for 60 cents a copy.

'Hill' Adjournment Agreement Sought

A two-party agreement to curtail the legislative program and let Congress go home early in August was under discussion by leaders yesterday.

Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the GOP Policy Committee, said he hopes some agreement can be reached between Republicans and Democrats soon on what major issues will be dealt with before this session ends.

Taft said Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic leader, had suggested he would be willing to talk the matter over with the Republicans.

Some Projects Periled

If the program is narrowed, some of President Truman's fair deal proposals are not likely to see any action in this session. Because it is election year a midsummer adjournment ahead of the fall campaign has been the target all along.

Truman proposals likely to be by-passed, among others, include the Brannan farm plan, compulsory health insurance and Taft-Hartley repeal. However these never had much chance in the curtailed session anyway. The Senate already has indicated clearly that it plans to shelve a Fair Employment Practices Commission bill.

President Truman has been pressing for action on a Senate-approved aid-to-education bill now bogged down in the House, an extension of rent controls, expansion of unemployment benefits and renewal of the military draft.

Congress may pass finally on the draft and rent control issues, but the outlook for the others is not bright.

ITO Approval Asked

Mr. Truman also has been asking for Congressional approval of the International Trade Organization charter. Republicans have served notice they will fight it vigorously. If the Administration brings it up, leaders may have to say goodbye to August quitting plans.

Democrats and Republicans seem agreed that at least four major issues ought to be disposed of before adjournment.

These include (1) the 29-billion-dollar omnibus appropriations measure carrying funds to finance the Government in the year beginning July 1, (2) a second year's authorization and appropriation for foreign arms aid, (3) expansion of Social Security coverage, and (4) some reduction in excise taxes.

of the plans and refused to kill them, but the issue has centered in the Senate by default. The House has too much difficulty mustering a majority of its 435 members.

In filing the new proposals in March, Mr. Truman estimated they would bring to completion almost 50 percent of all the Hoover recommendations, counting work previously done.

The figure then was regarded as probably too high; now it is obvious that a much lower record will be reached—perhaps 35 to 45 percent, in the two years of legislation.

The first of the 21 plans killed called for a shakeup of the National Labor Relations Board—favored by labor and opposed by industry. It got 23 Democratic votes and five Republican. It was downed, 53-30. The Citizens Committee did not take sides.

Aside from the White House plans, very little legislation is being pressed this session by reorganization supporters, and even this is stalled for the present. Action on the proposal to end the political appointment of postmasters was postponed "indefinitely." A proposed change in Government accounting practices is making no visible headway.

Reasons for the decline in enthusiasm for the Hoover ideas are obscure. Hoover Plan supporters have speculated on wholly unfounded suspicions that some Republicans are seizing a chance to shoot more holes in Mr. Truman's legislative programs. Or, that some Democrats would rather shoot at reorganization than start the debate on civil rights.

A more obvious reason is the powerful array of opposition which testified against the plans before the Senate Expenditures Committee.

The opposition witnesses were mainly clients of the bureaus concerned—industries and individuals who balked at any further centralization of power in the agencies regulating them.

On the other hand, support for the Hoover proposals was weak, numerically speaking. Frequently it consisted of one voice—the representative of the Citizens Committee for the Hoover report.

Expert testimony in behalf of the proposals was frequently lacking for several reasons, including these:

1. Heads of the agencies to be streamlined were seldom enthusiastic about the proposed shakeups.
2. The Citizens Committee, a voluntary group, lacked funds or facilities to prepare exhaustive testimony, though its membership embraces several hundred distinguished figures in business and labor, former Cabinet officers and Congress members, and two former Vice Presidents of the United States.
3. Supporters of the plans may have placed too much reliance on the fact that two years of research already had been done, with arguments and findings printed in a shelf of reports by the Hoover Commission and its "task forces" of experts.

The first six reorganization plans follow a single pattern. Each would center in a Cabinet officer full authority to control and reorganize his department. Many subordinates who now enjoy independent powers would lose them.

The next seven would give the chairmen of various regulatory commissions full executive powers in the agency. The other members would deal with policy only.

The next seven would accomplish various shifts of Federal functions, and the last, No. 21—approved on Friday—abolishes the Maritime Commission and creates a new three-man board and a maritime administration in the Department of Commerce.

Early This Week House to Act On Two D. C. Fund Bills

The House has set today and Tuesday to act on the $71,796,352 deficiency bill and the District's $112,850,340 appropriations bill for the fiscal year starting July.

The House leadership has designated the two fund measures in the order listed, but Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee hopes both bills will clear by nightfall today.

The deficiency bill carries money to help meet the cost of last year's various pay boosts for thousands of Federal workers. Prompt congressional action will stave off payless pay days in early June.

In another action set today the House District Committee probably will be polled on a bill to authorize Federal loans of $23,000,000 to expand the Washington water system over 10 years.

Joint Senate-House District Committee hearings were held last week. Senator Lester C. Hunt, chairman of the Senate subcommittee handling the measure, said yesterday he will seek earliest possible full committee approval and ask Senate floor action immediately thereafter.

Late this week the House is scheduled to act on the Baltimore-Washington Parkway measure. A similar bill to give the go-ahead on the uncompleted roadway is before the Senate Public Works Committee.

D. C. Will Feel Group to Meet Postal Slash Effects Today On All-in-One Charity Plan

The real impact of reduced postal service in Washington probably will be felt today for the first time.

Assistant Postmaster General W. Gordon Bell said the principal change Saturday was closing of window service at all branches at noon instead of the usual 1 p. m. The downtown Benjamin Franklin station, up till now a 24-hour, 7-day operation, also closed at noon and will reopen at 8 a. m. today.

The Main Postoffice closed at 6 p. m. Saturday and will reopen today at 8 a. m. Previously this, too, has been a round-the-clock operation.

Residential deliveries today will be reduced from two-a-day to one; parcel post delivery to once daily; branch offices will close at 5:30 p. m. instead of 6 and final pickups from collection boxes will be between 6 and 8 p. m.

The Main Postoffice will stay open until 6 p. m. for window service and the Benjamin Franklin until 5:30. However, letter drops will be open there and at National Airport throughout the night, Bell said.

A 31-man committee named to decide how to reduce the number of fund drives in the Washington area will hold its first meeting Tuesday. Chairman Frank J. Luchs announced yesterday.

Luchs said the group will meet in the board room of the Riggs National Bank, 1503 Pennsylvania ave. n.w., at 10 a. m.

The committee was created at a citizens meeting called by the Commissioners May 10 to discuss problems caused by the 20 or more fund drives conducted here each year.

The 150 Government, business and civic leaders at that meeting expressed the general feeling the drives should be consolidated into two or three campaigns.

Luchs said his committee will start from this point and decide how to do it. The committee will report recommendations back to the larger group for action, he said.

$283,000 Offered by Sanitary Group

Dwight B. Galt, chairman of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission disclosed yesterday his group is willing to assume responsibility for $283,000 of the cost of installing storm water drainage for the proposed widening of Georgia ave.

Galt wrote the Montgomery County council that the commission would assume that amount but pointed out that an additional $172,000 should be paid by the State Roads Commission since this part of the project is "an integral part of the through State highway."

Galt advised that "aside from the legal consideration involved, we do not feel that this expenditure of State-wide benefit should be borne by the local residents of this area."

Galt stated that the commission is willing to commit $100,000 of the present storm water drainage bond issue, authorize $93,000 from the next commitment and an additional $90,000 from the next succeeding authorization.

He suggested that the commission members confer with the County Council to reach agreement.

The council had written to the Sanitary Commission requesting that the commission assume all of the cost of storm water drainage construction. Georgia ave. is scheduled to be widened this summer from Silver Spring to Glenmont.

Colors Massed War Dead Honored at Cathedral

Flags and banners of more than 100 patriotic and civic organizations were carried yesterday at the annual massing of the colors service at the Washington Cathedral.

The service in memory of the war dead was sponsored by the Military Order of World Wars. Senator Edward Martin (R., Pa.), main speaker, declared that "too many of us have begun to feel that Government can plan better than God."

The Nation, he said, has allowed "material progress to advance beyond our gains in spiritual strength."

"We have been indifferent toward law evasion, racketeering, chiseling and other corrupt results of the desire for an easy way of life," the Pennsylvania Republican asserted.

On the other hand, he continued, the United States from Colonial times has been the home of deeply religious people and has "made greater progress, in less than 200 years, than any other nation since the world began."

Death Toll Rises To 66 in German Coal Mine Blast

Gelsenkirchen, Germany, May 21 (U.P.)—The death toll in the Dahlbusch coal mine explosion rose to 66 tonight as two more seared victims of one of Germany's worst mine disasters died in a hospital.

The new deaths brought to eight the number of miners who died today from injuries suffered in the explosion and fire that ripped through the Ruhr mine's shaft No. 6 near here yesterday. Authorities said 58 of the 130 miners believed to be in the pit were killed instantly.

Cause of the disaster was not yet known. But rescue workers said the explosion may have been caused by a short circuit which ignited escaping gas at the coal face.

District's Apathy to Sesqui Laid to Number of Reasons

with friends and foes of Freedom Fair produce these thoughts: Citizen apathy: Washingtonians live in the historic showcase of America. Everyone comes to the Capital to celebrate something every year. Parades, celebrations and commemorations are a daily routine here and consequently the edge has been taken off the idea of another gala show, even for themselves.

Most State and city anniversary celebrations are strictly means to bolster business and gain national attention. But, comparatively speaking, Washington never has had to fight for a living. It's not an industrial town. Government is the backbone, and Government activity never folds up with economic slumps.

Washington is a huge convention town with relatively few days during the year when large blocks of hotel rooms remain empty.

The rumor that some interests are opposing the Fair because it might be the impetus for building a new hotel, and hence offer new competition, is ridiculed by those accused.

Big Business Attitude: Some observers insist some important businessmen have dragged their feet on the Freedom Fair ever since it was proposed at the White House by Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman of the Sesqui. They assign these sundry reasons:

The committee of 15 which envisioned the city's sesqui observance back in 1946 had in mind a series of special events along the lines of the Cherry Blossom Festival. Some say the fair idea was sprung on them at the White House, thus handing President Truman a tailor-made, crowd-gathering bonanza.

Economically, established businessmen are weary, their adversaries claim, of a huge fair grounds on the outskirts of the city that might draw restaurant, theater and hotel business from the central area.

That most similar expositions are a "poor man's circus" which primarily attract people for one-day, budget-pitching visits, is another reason assigned to the cool response in some quarters.

Moor Shares Spotlight With Bales

By Paul Hume

Orchestral music entered this year's Festival of American Music in last night's National Gallery concert.

Richard Bales conducted four works, with Paul Moor as pianist in one of them, and Rex Hinshaw, clarinetist, in another. The compact evening began with Charles Ives' Third Symphony, which Bales premiered in Washington at the Library of Congress last December.

The symphony grows in beauty and originality with each repeated hearing. Its lucid orchestration heralds the work of Coplands and Virgil Thomsons to come. Its free dissonance and syncopation anticipate Ives' juniors, Hindemith and Stravinsky.

Bales will repeat the symphony again next Sunday. Added rehearsal should give it gentler motion in the first movement and correct some string intonation.

The tone of the orchestra was pure and warm throughout. Moor soloed in the first Washington hearing of Walter Piston's Concertino for piano and orchestra. The fun and vigor of the rapid moments in the concertino share with some quiet and highly expressive writing for solo piano. The work is precisely the proper length to say its say and stop. Piston keeps it alert and fresh at every point, with a technical skill that hides under a bright, polished sound.

Moor, much admired for his earlier appearances at the Phillips Gallery, played with deft ease. His control kept tricky pages firmly in place, and he balanced the piano against the chamber orchestra with skill. The players joined him in the virtuoso account.

David Diamond's music for Romeo and Juliet was the evening's other novelty. Diamond gets the family feuding over in the first episode. The row is noisy, busy, and efficient. From then on, in scenes describing the lovers alone, then Romeo with the Friar, Juliet with her nurse, and finally their deaths, he writes in restrained mood.

Harmonies that sound modal, a witty polyphony in the ladies' scene, and a moving finale mark this as one of the fine, late works of Diamond's pen. His handling of instruments is that of a master.

Meanwhile, the Gayety Theater was filled with an enthusiastic audience gathered to see Ballet Solree.

The program was devised as a testimonial to Steve Cochran, former manager of the National Theater, now recovering from a severe accident. It was sponsored by the Variety Club of Washington.

Watching the company's Caucasian Sketches, we realized the immense problems of preparing young dancers for presentation in an entire program of this fluid medium. It was a pleasure to see ballet danced with scenery and costumes.

Venita Louise, one of the young stars of the company, has just been invited to become a member of the Sadler Wells Ballet School in London. Her admirers in last night's audience filled the theater with shouts of praise for the promising dancer.

One strong protest is unavoidable: the music for the evening was played on the worst piano these ears have ever listened to for over one minute. The planning for the program was obviously pointed in extra-musical directions.

strongly denies any lukewarm attitude toward Freedom Fair. The board points out it helped draft the original legislation for a Sesquicentennial celebration and was instrumental in seeing it through Congress.

Two incidents: There is unanimity on this one point: L'Affaire Alexander which broke about two months after a reluctant Congress finally voted $3,000,000 for the city observance was a most "staggering blow." The incident prompted the comment among businessmen: "We simply lost confidence in the Sesquicentennial Leasing Bureau."

The Alexander affair is briefly this. Last fall Barron gave a "letter of intent" to a private corporation (designated the Sesquicentennial Leasing Bureau) for the exclusive right to lease 12 million dollars worth of industrial space to Fair exhibitors. The corporation would receive 5 percent of the rental fees.

Last December 24 a story broke alleging that Paul Alexander, a corporation shareholder, had offered a local contractor Sesqui construction work in return for a 10 percent kickback of any building profits.

Alexander was described as a Missourian who made his contact with the Sesqui through Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee after a bitter battle.

Other corporation members promptly dissociated themselves from Alexander's reported action. And Alexander promptly denied the story, asserting the questioned construction proposal referred to "independent buildings" and were not connected with the Sesqui Freedom Fair.

Only three days before the Alexander affair broke, George M. Rowland, Jr., resigned as director of design and exhibit for the Sesqui Commission. He was also holding the post as vice president of Gardner Displays, which did much of the preliminary work on Freedom Fair under contract.

Six days after the two fareups, the Sesqui Executive Committee voted to recommend postponement of the Fair from this summer to next spring.

Politics: Most persons close to the Sesqui picture maintain politics was not decisive in Freedom Fair's painful birth. Nevertheless, casual remarks are passed around that the Fair would put the President on display.

In the session-long row in Congress over Sesqui appropriations, Sesqui friends point to a Republican economy bloc as their biggest obstacle.

Legislative Defect: A belatedly discovered omission in the Sesqui enabling legislation, approved by the Eightieth Congress, may have been the straw that broke Freedom Fair's back.

Early this year, it became evident to Sesqui officials that a Government agency, bound by Government red tape, could not operate a 25-million-dollar exposition. The Commission therefore proposed formation of a non-profit corporation under Sesqui Commission auspices to handle the Fair, lock-stock-and-barrel.

It was then that Sesqui people realized their basic act failed to include a provision exempting the Sesqui Commission from the law forbidding creation of Government corporations.

Attorney General McGrath finally ruled that a non-profit corporation could not legally be set up to run the Fair.

Staff and Administration problems: In between the foregoing highlights of Freedom Fair's unsettled story have been other internal problems. For one, it operated largely behind closed doors. In sort of hip-pocket fashion for many months after the legislation was on the books. After the Alexander affair, it indicated it would operate in a goldfish bowl basis.

Where should the Fair be located has been another perpetual headache. The first idea to be vetoed was the Monument Grounds. Then an eye was trained on West Potomac Park but the Navy's decision not to raze some temporary buildings there spiked that location. Next shot was Anacostia Park at the foot of East Capitol st.

There, besides being considered too small, officials ran into the same problem of Government buildings and nearby trailer-type dwellings. Since then, there have been a few quick, but not serious, passes at Bolling and other nearby military fields.

At the moment the Sesqui Commission faces a House Appropriations Committee investigation of its books to determine how much of its three-million-dollar appropriation can be returned to the Treasury.

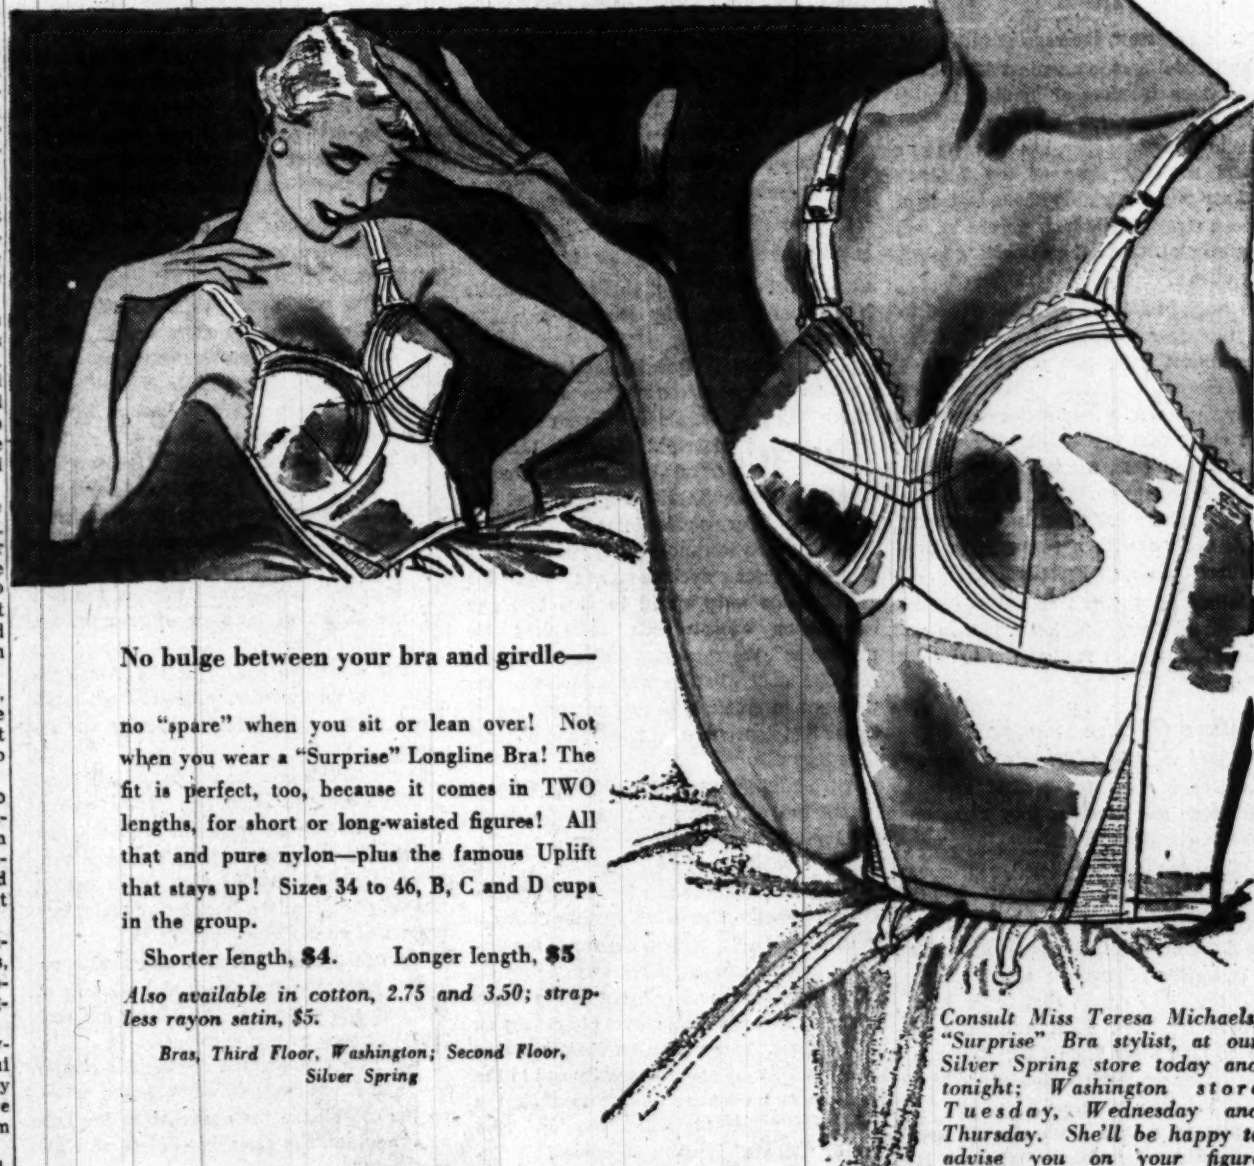

With the recommendation to cancel the Fair, the Sesqui Executive Committee recommended $1,250,000 be put in reserve for return to the Treasury. More than one million has been budgeted for this year's events, with the remainder either slated to pay off undetermined claims on Freedom Fair letter of intent contract work, for augmenting the 1950 program or also for return to the Treasury.

The future: There's much on the credit side. The $550,000 amphitheater in Rock Creek Park will be a permanent structure. It is to open July 6 with Paul Green's "Faith of Our Fathers" symphonic drama. The 1950 program will include several special events, sports, historical and artistic, and plans are going ahead at accelerated pace. The Cavalcade of Freedom show September 16 is expected to be a top event.

And Paul Massmann, the new Sesqui general manager, says Washington still could have a Freedom Fair without a nonprofit corporation if: (1) a 200-acre level site could be found, large enough for industry to construct its own buildings; (2) top-level Government officials were assigned to the commission from all Federal agencies where the Sesqui would have dealings, and (3) there is united citizen support for the project.

The Road Back To America

For weeks the Capital has been seized and convulsed by a terror. It is a terror akin to the evil atmosphere of the alien and sedition laws in John Adams' Administration. That is the measure of the problem to which, with our readers' indulgence, we here propose to address ourselves at some length.

What has permitted this thing to come to pass?

The rising distrust, the roaring bitterness, the ranging of Americans against Americans, the assault on freedom of inquiry, the intolerance of opposition—all this malaise, it seems to this newspaper, has its roots in a deep and troubled state of the Nation's mind. Fear and frustration abound—fear of the unseen struggle in which we are locked, and frustration because of our inability to get directly at it.

Some among us, to be sure, have tried to distort this fear and this frustration for selfish political gain, and the fact serves to their eternal discredit. But that does not alter the feeling that real reasons for concern exist, that our country faces, and will continue to face, dangers greater than we have ever known. To defeat those dangers we must know them, and, knowing them, meet them with a constructive program rather than with hysterical flight.

This is one newspaper's appeal to Americans to support action which will turn on the light of truth and restore the national harmony.

The Nature Of The Danger

The danger we face today is new in our history. There are three central aspects of this danger, and together they make up the cause of our discontents.

First, there is the unparalleled, cancerous evil of totalitarianism. That evil is the kinship of nazism, fascism, Japanese militarism and communism. It is made up of the savage depravity of Dachau and Buchenwald and the slave camps that today hold 1 out of 12 Russians. It is a turning of the face of man away from God; it is unremitting terror against religion and ethics and morality. The slavery it imposes on men's bodies may have some resemblance to dark spots in prior history, but there is no precedent for its fiendish grip on men's minds. Its methods have been illuminated by Koestler's Darkness at Noon; its full potential by George Orwell's 1984.

Second, this evil now controls a great world power, wielding authority over hundreds of millions of people and a major industrial empire. Because of this power, and because of atomic bombs and high-speed airplanes, Russia can now make war directly upon our country. The protection of oceans which had kept us free from attack for over a century was already dwindling in World War II. But for the first time we now live from day to day under the shadow of devastating or crippling attack.

Third, the Communist state has the fanatical devotion of fifth columnists in every country abroad, including our own. Communism evokes this support through a kind of hypnotism that defies reason and is almost beyond the imagination of civilized man. Thus, for the first time in our history, we have a secret conspiratorial force in our midst. We know from the Canadian spy case, the Hiss case and the Fuchs case that this conspiracy can do grave harm to our security. We know from the case of Sorge—who though ostensibly a leading Nazi official—was actually the key Communist spy in Japan—that the fifth column often shields itself in the clothes of anticommunism.

Witch-Hunts Won't Work

Why not use any methods to fight it, then, if the danger is so real? Why not, in short, the most thoroughgoing purge or witch-hunt? Ought we not to consider one scalp worth the incidental persecution of 10 innocents? Ought we not to change our concepts and put the burden of proof on the accused?

That course, this newspaper submits, would be burning down the house of the American way of life in order to get at the rats in it. That is the way to do the work of the fifth column and to advance the aim of its Kremlin masters rather than to destroy it. For the hope of the Kremlin rests upon a break-up of the free world as a natural process of history. We are held by the Communists to be doomed. The tempo of this kind of collapse-conquest depends upon the speed with which America is softened and weakened. Here is the key to Soviet action. The Communists rely on the United States to do their own dirty work for them, so as to guarantee victory and save them a war between the two spheres of power in which they and the rest of us would perish. Witch-hunting thus amounts to doing the job of softening and weakening America for Russia.

Test the idea of witch-hunting against crimes with which we have had more experience. Nothing is more loathsome to society than the sex criminal. Yet we have not adopted lynch law as a proper antidote; for we know that vigilantism threatens all our civilization. It is as foolish to reckon the witch-hunters the true foes of communist as to reckon lynch mobs the true foes of sex maniacs.

To go further: Witch-hunting is weakening our front-line soldiers in the cold war. Revilement of our diplomats has come to such a pass that in a recent line-up for tickets for a symphony concert in Washington a man who admitted to a reporter that he was from the State Department was publicly laughed at. Sincerely and solemnly George Kennan, the counselor of the State Department, who is habitually given to understatement, said recently in Milwaukee:

"The atmosphere of public life in Washington does not have to deteriorate much further to produce a situation in which very few of our more quiet and sensitive and gifted people will be able to continue in government. . . . I am not a pessimist about the cold war. But this is on the assumption that we can mobilize the best we have in human nature in this country to help us fight it. . . . The margin of safety with which our country moves in the world today is not great enough to permit us to be reckless and wasteful with the talents and the idealism of those people we depend on for the generalship of our peacetime battles."

Tearing Our Unity Apart

Witch-hunting will drive out of Government the very brains which alone can give us victory in the cold war. Already we have seen a conservative and Republican father forced to leave a responsible position because his teen-age daughter fell prey to Communist doctrine. If that sort of penalty is condoned, then any modern parent is reckless in accepting public responsibility, and we should just as logically attack the Chicago Tribune because a remote relative of its family helped finance Henry Wallace. This kind of onslaught on character will leave us a Government of spineless mediocrities. History is full of examples. We know from German Minister of Munitions Albert Speer's testimony at Nuernberg that Hitler's great weakness was that his subordinates were afraid to give him any information except such as suited his prejudices. We know that Stalin's diplomats tell him only what he wants to hear. Do we want to create a similar atmosphere of terror that deprives us of honest and fearless thinking?

Witch-hunting tears our unity apart and lowers the discussion of real problems to the level of the gutter. McCarthy's Goebbels-Vishinsky technique of the lie followed by the ever-bigger lie was bound to provoke a "you're another" reaction. Senator Chavez's assault on Louis Budenz's sexual misconduct came, to be sure, after extreme provocation, but it was as irrelevant to the issues before us as were McCarthy's utterances on homosexuals. There is an un-American ring to such a colloquy about depravity and to the attempts and counterattempts to drag the prestige of religion into such squalor. This sort of "debate" is more at home in Communist purge trials than in the legislative halls of a free republic.

Witch-hunting hurts us abroad by repelling our allies, whose help we need in upholding the free world. Senator Flanders concludes that the behavior pattern "is causing astonishment and uncertainty in our relations abroad." The London Economist writes of our "months of degradation" and laments the fact that there is "no Senator Vandenberg to bring the barbarians to their senses." The Prime Minister of Pakistan, speaking for a vital part of non-Communist Asia, believes that we are thinking only of the start of war. A growing cynicism about our intentions in Europe is fostering the idea that Europe can be "neutral," though such "neutrality" would make war inevitable.

Wolf! Wolf!

Finally, witch-hunting will defeat the purported purpose of witch-hunting. Aesop taught us long ago the foolishness of the little boy who falsely called, "Wolf, Wolf!" Earnest efforts to combat the fifth column are still suffering because in recent memory William Allen White and Paul Hoffman and Wall Street lawyers and Robert A. Taft have been stigmatized by irresponsible characters as being some shade of red or pink. There can be no end to the range of hysteria and fear. Because Sorge, the Russian spy in Japan, operated in the disguise of a Nazi official, some of our counterintelligence enthusiasts are already aiming suspicions at even the most conservative areas of the Republican Party and at other circles of the most militant anticommunism.

We know that some sincere people—for example, the New Leader—claim that we have had these abuses before and have lived through them, as when business and finance were pilloried during the 1930s. They argue that this did little harm, and try to show that the price is worth it. Is it? The class bitterness stirred up by those excesses still hurts our unity. Our way of life surely envisages investigation accompanied by the rudiments of fair play. The very expression of our political liberty is the opposition that the witch-hunters would stifle. Our freedoms begin with the freedom of inquiry that they regard as treasonable.

The mad-dog quality of McCarthyism has become so apparent that its power for sowing confusion and suspicion has probably spent its force. Despite all the Senator's artful dodging, the American people know that he has failed to support his basic charge of Communist Party members operating in large numbers in our State Department.

However, it would be reckless to ignore the circumstances that permitted this escape and this aberration to paralyze American diplomacy and to thrust fears and doubts into the minds of our people. The urgent problem is to find a way back to a basic unity, to traditional American standards.

We must provide a way for reducing the darkness of ignorance in which fear thrives. Every soldier knows the clutching trepidation in his heart when, in guerilla operations, he feels the enemy everywhere and nowhere. The aggression of the Communist state will present us with real danger for many years. It is enough to ask our citizens to see the threat when they have the fullest and most honest information about it. It is intolerable for them to face it when they have no means for judging the wildest rumors about internal security.

A Program For Action

When the possibility of the H-bomb was added to the other horrors of the twentieth century, The Washington Post urged the appointment of a commission of leading citizens to assess our over-all security and to give to the American people the fullest possible information. Since then Senator Vandenberg has said that such a commission is necessary to work out foreign economic policy after ECA. Dr. James B. Conant and Dr. Vannevar Bush have made similar suggestions for what Mr. Churchill called "exalted brooding" by the Nation's leading citizens.

It is essential that a "commission on national security" be created now to survey the major aspects of national security—the internal menace of the fifth column, civilian defense, development of new weapons, the size and use of military expenditures, economic restoration of our friends and allies.

The commission should be appointed by the President after genuine bipartisan agreement on its membership. That, alone, would give it the public acceptance essential to its job of creating public understanding. While the commission's members must be drawn from different interests to insure confidence, it can be compact enough in size to permit coherence of effort.

What can such a commission accomplish? It cannot promise our people peace and happiness. It cannot even make those decisions which inevitably are the responsibility of the Executive and the Congress. It obviously cannot take over the detailed work of the FBI or the Chiefs of Staff or other agencies. But what it can do is to take a fresh look at our situation and give the American people a trustworthy, "unpartisan" statement of the salient facts affecting our security.

It can do this because the people will trust a commission so organized. Only such a commission can be entrusted with the full range of secret papers, including such confidential papers as FBI files which cannot properly be given the Legislature under our system of checks and balances.

We can get from such a commission an honest picture of the pluses and minuses of our cold war progress. And there are real pluses as well as major minuses. In regard to the fifth column, the revelations of the Hiss and Fuchs cases show the danger, while on the other hand the operation of the loyalty program, the smashing defeat of Wallaceism, the reduction of Communist power in trade unions and other developments mark out the progress against infiltration. On the foreign front, the defeat of communism in western Europe and the growth of Titoism must be weighed against the Russian victory in China.

Raising The Level

From Justice Jackson's opinion on the non-Communist oath and from Judge Medina's handling of the Communist conspiracy case we know that our liberty-minded institutions can meet the threat without throwing our liberties away. We must raise our conduct elsewhere to these same levels.

This commission is not proposed in order to put an end to congressional committees, but rather to create an atmosphere in which they can again provide the country with the light it needs. The executive branch is properly a subject for congressional concern; particularly, in these days, the State Department. That is where the real effort will be made to infiltrate.

The Washington Post has constantly upheld the congressional power of investigation against claims that the power has become intolerable because of recent abuses. In 1948 the whole subject was explored in an editorial series, "Turning on the Light," which supported the need for full investigation and suggested a code of fair practice which would prevent flagrant abuses. The dignity and respect of Congress will be fully restored only when some such rules of fair play are adopted. The appointment of the citizens' commission here suggested will not run counter to but should in fact hasten the coming of this essential legislative reform.

This unpartisan citizens' committee would elevate current debate. It would catalyze the decencies of America. In the light of full and trusted information—which proper composition of the commission would insure—new laws can be worked out by the Congress wherever necessary for our internal security. For instance, there should be public registration of all fund-raising organizations to expose the financing of subversion. In addition, the statute of limitations on espionage should be extended to provide a tool better suited than perjury for getting at real fifth column activities. There are already on the statute books many laws against subversive activity. How they need to be revised, while still preserving our liberties, should be studied in the light of true knowledge of the size of the menace. An authoritative and unpartisan commission can provide that knowledge.

Communism everywhere is on the march. The masters of the Kremlin have not taken a recess during the months we have ignored the real battles of the cold war for the sham battles of witch-hunting. Naked self-interest demands a halt to this diversion of our energies.

Establishment of this "commission on national security" will start us on the road back to our America—a land of freemen marching forward with confidence in ourselves and in our mission.

Letters To The Editor

One Drive Too Many

After being asked to donate to the Hangnail Fund, the Eye-Side Fund, and the Athletic Foot Fund, I am now being subjected to a high-minded mooch from the Fundiest Fund of all. The "save-me-from-the-Commie Fund." Some fun(d)! Brother, have you got a buck?

What a joy it must be to old Joe and his boys to see our strongest veterans' organization, the American Legion, bend to public begging in order to "save our way of life." Who's scaring who?

There are about three types of people who will listen to communistic mouthings—those who are living under despotic governments, those who failed in spite of opportunity, and those who study high-minded tripe until their logics run astray. In our country, America, they will never represent 10 percent of our population. What in blazes are we cringing from?

The letter before me, signed by the national commander of a great organization, says I will prove to be a red-blooded American by mailing a fast buck. Fie, and shame! that he should use a word like "red." I thought I proved I had blood in me when I lost some in Flanders many years ago.

Right now I am a "ripe" prospect for a "soft touch." Will someone please solicit me for a donation to a "Fund to End All Funds?" I'm ready to be plucked.

Rome Pilgrimage

I do not question the news value of happenings in Rome, in connection with the Roman Catholic observance of Holy Year, nor the propriety of a general newspaper in carrying news reports on such happenings. But when as distinguished a newspaper as The Washington Post gives front page space to such trivia as contained in the letter of Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, published in the issue of May 15, I think the general reader—and subscriber—may properly protest. Washington members of the Roman Catholic Church will possibly be interested, particularly if they know the local people mentioned, but should expect to find such letters in the publications of their church.

I am quite sure Miss Bowers herself makes no pretense that she is a writer. Her letter is a report, and not a travel essay. But besides general triviality, her letter contains some misinformation, which The Post should have corrected if it is to publish the letter at all. (The fort at Rapallo is not Roman, it is 5000 years old. If Julius Caesar is buried in the Forum, his grave is not marked.) But my chief objection is to the style—or lack of it. Of the Vatican Miss Bowers writes: "It would take many words to inadequately describe its glories." Why does The Post allot so many words to such inadequate reporting?

Communist Stigma

Great political disturbances are about to result from the Un-American Activities Committee's question, "Are you a Communist?"

To speak or to act as if some single practice or preaching of the Russians is condoned becomes automatically the guilt of "following the Communist line" or of being a "yellow traveler." The situation is complicated by the fact that it would take the balance of a mental tightrope walker to draw a clear-but line between the general objectives of communism and many of the successful and popular innovations of the New Deal.

To obviate the charge of being a Communist a person must: have no relations or friendships with any Russians or their acquaintances; publicly condemn whatever they do and the way they do it; never be seen in their presence; hold and publicly profess a religious faith; be opposed to collectivism of every sort, it being the antithesis of individualism; believe revolution is wrong whatever the provocation; believe in the two-party system of electing officials; favor the exclusion from all public office of radicals; favor their exclusion from labor unions; and all social organizations; condemn building up military might when the Russians do it, but favor it when done by the democracies; condemn materialism as a sin against God; approve imitation of Communist methods if used by the anti-Communists in retaliation.

This country has grown great without this form of persecution by indirection. The proper question should be: Are you an American who gives full allegiance to the Constitution of the United States?

No Aid To The Philippines

President Elpidio Quirino of the Philippines, in his inaugural address on December 30, 1949, said, "Help me build for our people a new reputation for honesty and fair dealing. Help me establish a new integrity in our thinking. In our words, in our deeds. Let us be men as the best of our breed have tried to be." What he said is indeed a confession of need: the amber signal for the planned or projected traffic in aid, help, relief and rehabilitation from the United States to the Philippines.

The chaotic conditions in the Philippines are "politicized-made." America can never, by more American dollars, legislate for the morality of any people or any group of men who must still have further schooling in the fundamental principle that a "public office is a solemn public trust."

We read and we hear that the Philippines need aid. My question is: what aid, for whom and why?

Military aid? President Quirino said that the Philippines have received sufficient military aid from the United States, including American Army, naval and aerial bases there.

Against communism? The Philippines have been predominantly Roman Catholic for the sixteenth century.

Economic aid? President Quirino did not press for such aid in August, 1949, and he then was of the opinion that four or five years was a reasonable period for anticipating economic aid. Could it be that economist President Quirino was mistaken in all his previous declarations of a sound and solid Philippine economy?

I say show me the latest and unquestioned official financial statement of the Philippine treasury, the list of names and addresses of paid guerrillas, unpaid guerrillas and former political Filipino prisoners held by Ja-

East And West

May I call the attention of your readers to the fact that the most lucid approach yet made to the ideological differences between East and West, with their solution, was outlined in a truly remarkable address by Charles Malik, Minister of Lebanon to the United Nations, before the U. N. Assembly. Entitled, "War and Peace," Dr. Malik's exposition, a critique of East and West, deserves to rank with the great orations of history.

A group of interested Americans has arranged for a reprinting of the address, which may now be obtained, free of charge, from Overbrook Press, Stamford, Conn.

Budenz's Change

Mr. Reardon (letter published May 17) and many others may question Mr. Budenz's sincerity in changing "isms." Time alone can tell, but I challenge Mr. Reardon's statement that Budenz's change from an external "ism" to another "required little or no change in his process of thought."

Let him question Mr. Budenz's activities if he cares to do so. Let him not incorrectly speak of "frightening similarity" between "isms" (Communism and Catholicism) which he does not call by name but implies.

Mr. Reardon may study with benefit the absolute opposition of Communist and Catholic philosophies.

Matter of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Dangerous Deadlock

THE APPARENTLY interminable row between the State and Defense Departments over a Japanese peace treaty is the sort of thing which raises the question whether the United States is really capable of having a foreign policy at all. An immediate consequence of the deadlock between the two departments has been to place Secretary of State Dean Acheson in a thoroughly ridiculous position in London.

Acheson has had to tell his British and French opposite numbers that he really cannot talk about Japan simply because the American Government cannot make up its large, amorphous, mind. Since it is nonsense to discuss the Far East without mentioning Japan, the London discussions on the Asiatic situation have been about as meaningful as a production of "Hamlet" with the title role eliminated.

This is bad enough. But the future consequences could be a great deal more serious. A full eight months ago Acheson agreed with British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin that a Japanese peace treaty had become urgently necessary. The Defense Department then intervened, objecting to a treaty on security grounds, and the present deadlock began. And in the eight months' interval of delay, precisely those things have begun to happen which Acheson, Bevin and their advisers feared might happen.

NEITHER ACHESON, Bevin, nor anyone else in his senses ever proposed that the United States should withdraw from Japan entirely. Instead, a vetoless peace conference (because vetoless, not subject to Soviet obstruction) was to confer on Japan all the trappings of sovereignty. The wear and apparatus of the American occupation was to be withdrawn entirely from Tokyo and the other big cities. But a bilateral American-Japanese treaty, a sort of Siamese twin to the peace treaty, was to grant the United States the right to maintain bases on the Japanese Islands.

When he took over the occupation of Japan almost five years ago, Gen. Douglas MacArthur shrewdly predicted, in effect, that the occupation would begin to lose its usefulness within three years, and would be threatened with disaster if it lasted five years. Any recent visitor to Japan can attest MacArthur's remarkable prescience.

The occupation has long since lost its initial drive and enthusiasm. The attempt to supervise every aspect of Japanese life is being politely sabotaged by the Japanese. And beneath the surface politeness, the contrast between the standards of life of the conquerors (most of whom "never had it so good") and the conquered is contributing to tensions which could, in time, become explosive.

These tensions are still largely subterranean, and only a few months ago it would have been possible to make the arrangement for bases without serious trouble with the Japanese. This is no longer the case. An election is scheduled in Japan on June 4. And not only the Communists, but powerful anti-Communist parties, are campaigning on a "no bases for any foreign power" line.

THUS EVEN if Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Gen. Omar Bradley, after their trip to Japan next month to confer with MacArthur, decide to reverse the present Defense Department stand, great harm will already have been done by the delay. Whatever the results of the forthcoming Japanese election, powerful forces within Japan will have been committed to opposition to a bilateral security treaty with the United States.

And it is highly significant that a few days ago, for the first time in the history of the occupation, a directive from the Supreme Commander was voted down by the Japanese Parliament, despite maximum American pressure. There is some mystery about the attitude of MacArthur in these circumstances. But the State Department, at least, on the basis of talks between MacArthur and Assistant Secretary of State Walton Butterworth, is convinced that MacArthur recognizes the need for an early peace treaty. MacArthur's public statements would seem to support this assumption.

As for the Defense Department, there could in fact be only one intelligible justification of its position—the expectation of war within the very near future. But if the defense planners really expect war soon, then the policy of reducing American military strength has been more than foolish—it has been downright criminal.

It is more likely that the Defense Department's stand has derived from inertia and the instinctive military reluctance to dispense with a direct chain of command. Republican adviser John Foster Dulles has been assigned to take over from Butterworth the task of negotiating with the Defense Department on Johnson's and Bradley's return. Presumably some time this summer the issue will be settled by the National Security Council and the President. But if it is left unresolved much longer, the price of the deadlock may well be a universal anti-Americanism in Japan, which will undermine all the undoubted accomplishments of the occupation, and soften Japan for ultimate Communist conquest. That will be a heavy price to pay for inertia and indecision.

Truman Here And Acheson There

MR. TRUMAN came back to Washington from his tour just as Mr. Acheson was finishing up his work in London. The President and his Secretary of State are no doubt thinking the same thoughts and are no doubt intending to follow the same policies. But the times they have been singing do not belong to the same score.

Mr. Truman has been inviting the people to dream the American dream of an ever better life in happy and peaceful American communities. Mr. Acheson has made the people feel that they are so gravely threatened, that the resources of diplomacy are so nearly exhausted, that the situation cannot be righted except by a swift increase of American military power.

IF MR. TRUMAN is right about the future, he ought to tell Mr. Acheson to relax just enough to let one faint ray of hope into the dark room. But if Mr. Acheson is right, then he ought to be asking the President to stop talking about a better life and, instead, to put the country into the opening phase of a war economy.

For Mr. Truman's happy grimace at home and Acheson's grim and all but hopeless view of the world abroad are quite irreconcilable. The contrast is so wide that this Nation and no doubt the nations abroad are confused.

THE CENTRAL and critical issue at the London conference was, in effect, how each of the Atlantic nations was to reconcile its Truman with its Acheson. In each country there is on the one hand an estimate of what the civilians need and must have if they are to support the government in office—and on the other hand there is the estimate by the military commanders and the civilian officials who are associated with them of what the defense of the country, or of the Atlantic community, or of the whole non-Communist world, demands.

The two estimates cannot both be satisfied within the same budget, especially since it is the tendency both of the politicians, who have to please the voters, and of the soldiers, who want to be very secure, to give themselves the benefit of all the doubts.

In the end the conflicts between the two estimates have to be compromised and resolved in each national legislature. But before that can be done the conflicts of estimates have to be resolved and compromised in each cabinet. In France, in Britain, in Belgium and in all the others an agreement has to be reached which—translated into American terms—unites Truman with Acheson.

THIS question was posed at London and the committee was formed to worry about it. We shall be living with this question from now on.

3 Facilities Will Replace USO in Area

A Washington Committee of the new national group, Associated Services for the Armed Forces, successors to the deactivated USO, has been formed and will operate three facilities for servicemen here.

Joseph D. Kaufman of the Jewish Welfare Board was elected chairman for six months. Then Percy C. Brady of the National Catholic Community Service and Col. Henry P. Erwin of the Young Men's Christian Association will serve six month terms each as chairman, Kaufman said.

Milton W. King of the Jewish Welfare Board has been elected treasurer and Fred C. Lash of the Armed Services YMCA will be executive secretary.

The committee will operate facilities at the Armed Services YMCA, 1738 G st. nw.; NCCS Club, 1814 N st. nw., and the JWB Area Office, 1637 Massachusetts ave. nw.

The local group is one of 500 being formed throughout the Nation to fill the gap created by the ending of the USO. Through service fees, the program is expected to be nearly 50 percent self-supporting.

Lie Changes Plan, Will Take Plane For New York

Lake Success, N. Y., May 21 (AP). United Nations Secretary-General Trygve Lie will fly directly to New York Wednesday instead of sailing Thursday on the Queen Elizabeth as planned, it was announced tonight.

Lie, returning from Moscow, where he conferred with Premier Joseph Stalin and other Russian leaders on means of ending the cold war, will leave London Wednesday immediately after conferences with Prime Minister Clement Attlee and Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin.

Lie conferred yesterday with French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and President Vincent Auriol and plans to confer with Premier Georges Bidault on Monday. He will leave immediately by boat train for his London conferences.

The U. N. said Lie would arrive here Thursday morning.

Nagel to Make Talk

George Nagel, special agent of the FBI, will speak at a meeting of Maritime Americans, Inc. at 8 p. m. Thursday, at the Thomson School, 12th and L sts. nw.

man the Fair Dealer, Acheson the cold warrior. Snyder the business man-as-usual, and let us say, Symington, the crusader.

TO ASSIST and to prod each of the cabinets to reach agreement on policies which they will then present to the legislature, the London meeting created a committee, of which the American member is to be the chairman. The recommendations of the committee should strengthen the hands of the soldiers and foreign office officials in their arguments with their own finance ministers, reconstruction ministers and their political leaders and bosses.

Whether the committee will also strengthen the hands of the governments in dealing with their legislatures is likely to depend on whether the committee and its chairman have great wisdom and enormous tact. The American chairman will have to make very sure that when unpopular military expenditures at the expense of social services are presented to the parliaments, he, as an American, is not saddled with the responsibility for all that is disagreeable in the plan. The temptation of the politicians to pass the buck to him will be great. He will seem to have been appointed to sit there and receive the buck. It will be so easy, and so tempting, to let it be known around in the lobbies of the parliaments that the Americans insist on militarizing Europe, and that if the unpopular measure is not voted, the Americans may cut off Marshall aid. So the American chairman will have to watch his step.

THE COMMITTEE can, of course, do no more than assist each government somewhat in reaching a compromise between what the people want at home and what the soldiers and foreign office officials say they must have for abroad. In the United States this compromise is not too difficult to strike: the increased appropriations which the Pentagon really wants, and could use effectively in the near future, are not impossibly big. And I should like to say that they are really ridiculously small if they are measured against the inflammatory speeches which the ghost writers turn out for the big brass to speak.

But in Britain and France there is no such margin as there is here. A serious program of rearmament would press heavily against the popular standard of life. It will, therefore, pose the gravest question of all—which is whether Europe can afford a serious rearmament, if it is to consist of conventional armies, and still have stable governments resting on a contented population.

THIS question was posed at London and the committee was formed to worry about it. We shall be living with this question from now on.

'Over 40' Fathers Take Lead In Post's Ideal Dad Contest

Where's the younger generation hiding? As the Ideal Father Contest checks off its first week, letters about "over 40" dads are out in the lead.

Remember, in this hunt to find the Washington area's most representative family man, there is no age limit. He can be "younger than springtime" or nearing his sesquicentennial celebration. (In the latter case, never mind writing, just call for the prizes.)

The "prime of life" candidates are getting themselves well established early. A neighbor nominated Leo G. Schmelzer, 3721 Livingston st. nw., "for all the 1950 honors."

"He holds down a job good enough to house, clothe and feed himself, his wife and his seven children. He works at it... He provides so well that there's not only enough of everything, but there's always an egg or coffee or lemon to loan an improvident neighbor who forgets to buy while the store's open."

Mary Jo Hayes, 55 Prince Georges ave., Kensington, Md., let the secret out of the bag in her entry. "My father is 44, but my mother won't tell her age. I think my daddy is the best daddy in the world. I have been wanting to tell you and the whole world about him. He can fix anything. Once my girl friend had a broken doll—the arms and the legs were out and the head. He took all the rubber and strung it all together. He made a perfect doll."

A neatly penned verse was one of the surprises in the crop of letters this week. "My dad's an artist, I say with glee. He's just completed a bust of me. I hear that it is quite a fad. Don't you think I've quite a Dad?"

And a P.S. in explanation was added: "I didn't write this as you can see. Mommie did it all for me."

William A. Smith, 1630 Irving st. nw., the father receiving the poetic bouquets, is a youngster in comparison to his "best dad" competitors. His two daughters, Linda Kay and Dale Ann, are only 7 months and 21 months respectively. Contest deadline is set for June 9, but get busy now and put your "neglected" father on the map. Ad-

By Sam Stavisky Post Reporter

Guess who's wooing John L. Lewis' to the OUPW membership. Lewis these days.

The labor movement's extreme left wing. Yep, the very lefty unions which castigated the United Mine Workers president because of his isolationism—after Russia got into the war—are now coyly looking to Lewis as the possible leader of a third labor organization to rival the AFL and CIO.

John L. recently got the royal brushoff from William Green, AFL president and onetime Lewis lieutenant, over the revived issue of labor unity. Philip Murray, CIO president and another former aide of Lewis, started the largest merger movement, and invited Lewis to participate in the talks.

Lewis accepted the bid. So did Green and the AFL executive council. But Green suggested that Lewis and other independent labor leaders be excluded from the main peace powwow between the AFL and CIO.

A sensitive fellow, Lewis is miffed at being pushed aside by Green. After all, the United Mine Workers has around a million members among the coal miners and sundry other workers here and in Canada. The lefty unions, never loath to make the most of an opportunity, have been trying to encourage John L. to go his own way and set up his own federation.

Last week, for instance, the United Office and Professional Workers, one of the 10 affiliates ousted, or scheduled for removal, from the CIO held its convention in Atlantic City. The UOPWA invited Lewis to come up from Washington and enjoy the sea breezes.

Lewis turned down the invitation with a note. He pointed out that "circumstances" would not permit acceptance because "of prior plans." He acknowledged "appreciation" for the convention bid, and signed off "with good

Yanks Wallop Indians, 14-5, 12-4, Before 79,570

The Washington Post Sports Monday, May 22, 1950 13 This Morning

With Shirley Povich
Detroit, Mich., May 21.—Hal Newhouser this season has attained two distinctions. He is (1) the highest paid pitcher in baseball and (2) the most overpaid; at least at this point.

When Bob Feller voluntarily agreed to take a salary cut from the Indians after his mediocre 1949 season, Newhouser zoomed into the highest salary bracket with a flat-rate contract that calls for $45,000 for his 1950 services. Those services, with more than a month of the season passed, have amounted to exactly three innings on behalf of the Tigers.

They weren't very competent innings, either. The Browns racked him up for four runs when Roy Sievers hit a homer over the bases crowded. Newhouser gave up five hits, walked two men and hit another. It was a dismal sort of debut.

Newhouser will be back in there as a starting pitcher again tomorrow against the Nats, though. Manager Red Rolfe has been talked out of his plan to use Hal as a relief man until the fellow could pitch himself into condition.

"I'M NO RELIEF pitcher," says Newhouser. "All my life, I've had to warm up for 20 minutes before the arm felt right. I'm no good in the bullpen when they need a pitcher on short notice."

Otherwise, Newhouser isn't making any excuses. The soreness that started in his shoulder and later descended into his upper arm in spring training, is done with, he says. "Against the Browns the other day, I was bothered mostly by my control. The arm felt all right. Control won't be one of my problems."

He's blaming only himself for his tardy get-away this season. "I pitched in St. Petersburg one day when I shouldn't have done it. It has set me back for two months. I feel bad about it, mostly because our pitching was supposed to win the pennant for us, and I haven't been much help. But I might still wind up winning 20."

IT'S PRETTY CLEAR to Newhouser, he says, that the teams the Tigers have to like are the Red Sox and Yankees. "On paper, the Red Sox look like the better ball club, but something must be wrong there," he commented. "If there wasn't, they'd be way out in front, the way they can powder that ball. Frankly, I don't like to pitch against 'em."

The Yankees, he thinks are a lucky ball club. "They win games they don't have any right to win, but maybe they're good enough to make their own breaks. Some clubs can get a lucky hit and maybe score a run. When the Yankees get a lucky hit there are usually two or three on base and everybody scores. But you have to give the Yanks credit for having those men on base most of the time."

He thinks the Tigers can take it all—"If I can get in there and help 'em." It's a pleasure to have Gerry Priddy backing up the Detroit pitching with his work around second base, says Hal. "We're getting the double plays we never used to make, and the only thing a pitcher likes better than a D.P. is his pay check."

FOR A COUPLE of years, now, Newhouser has been nursing a gripe, though. "I'm convinced they've sneaked a lively ball into the game—and it's got more jackrabbit in it than even last year. The way some of the fellows in this league are buntin' home runs into the stands, that ball must have everything on it except rabbit ears."

The pay-off, according to Newhouser, was the other day in batting practice when he saw Mickey McDermott, Boston pitcher, pump a ball into the centerfield stands at Briggs Stadium, 440 feet distant. "That proves something," said Newhouser. "That McDermott doesn't weigh over 150 pounds. And he had to provide his own power to hit a batting-practice pitch that far. That ball just leaped off his bat. When that skinny kid can belt 'em that far, you have to pitch and pray."

Crosby Arrives With Gadget, Long Underwear, Wisecracks

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 21 (AP)—Bing Crosby breezed into town for the British amateur golf tournament today armed with a brand new golf gadget but not much confidence.

"The only way that I can last more than one round," admitted the touring crooner, "is if Mr. J. K. Wilson is a very bad golfer."

Since Mr. Wilson, a local master builder who does a little crooning himself in an amateur way, practically annihilated the course yesterday when he shot a practice round of 70 in the rain, Crosby admitted Wilson didn't look so bad.

After a train, boat and automobile trip from Paris, "Der Bing" arrived here too late to practice on the championship course and had to work out over a practice course. He couldn't even get a caddy, but he didn't let that bother him.

"I don't need a caddy, except to carry the clubs," said Bing. "A friend of mine gave me a gadget that helps you figure the distance on each shot."

"You hold it up in the air like an artist looking at his thumb, then you move a couple of things and there's the distance. The only trouble is I don't know how to work it."

What is Bing going to wear in the tourney?

"I'm going to wear long underwear of a repulsive type covered by gabardine slacks, and if it's cold, another pair of pants on top of that which will make me look from the rear like Bob Hope."

"Did you practice golf when you were in Paris?" someone asked.

"Don't be silly," grinned Crosby. "Who goes to Paris to practice golf?"

Babe Zaharias Takes 144-Hole Cross-Country Golf

White Plains, N. Y., May 21 (AP)—Babe Zaharias, carding a 78 for a 144-hole total of 629, today won the $5000 first prize in the Weatherlane women's cross-country golf championship, edging out Louise Suggs by three strokes.

Miss Suggs matched the Babe's 2-under-par 78 today, and her two-day total of 155 was good for the $750 first prize for the 36-hole competition over the Knollwood Country Club course here.

Mrs. Zaharias also won $450 by finishing second in the 36-hole Knollwood competition, bringing her total winnings for the tour which started at Pebble Beach, Calif., April 29 to $7450.

Patty Berg, with an 81 today, finished in third place in the 144-hole competition with 647.

Lexington, Va., May 21 (AP)—Virginia Tech and Maryland from the north and Wake Forest and Clemson from the south will meet to determine the Southern Conference baseball championship in Greensboro, N. C., May 25, 26 and 27.

Virginia Tech was winner of the northern division, and Maryland was selected as the second team to represent the division in the tournament on the vote of the Northern coaches on the conference baseball committee.

Richard A. (Cap'n Dick) Smith, chairman of the committee, said George Washington's Colonials who finished second to Tech, did not play a home-and-home series with the other Northern clubs as required.

In Thursday's openers, Virginia Tech will battle Maryland.

Nats Swat Tigers, 6-2, On 3-Hitter By Marrero ball, then discombobulating 'em with a knuckler.

He even wangled a walk himself from Gray at the start of the third inning to set the stage for Yost's fourth homer over the season, which occurred on a 3-2 pitch. A bit later, the Nats muffed a bigger inning when with the bases full, Ortiz hit into a double play.

Sam Dente fished in another run for the Nats in the fourth when he singled to left to score Combs, who walked and advanced on Yost's infield single.

The Nats' 3-0 lead suddenly zoomed to 6-0 in the fifth. Stewart was safe on Kryhoski's fumble, and Robinson moved him to third with a single to right. There was a conference in the box and Manager Red Rolfe decided to leave Gray in. That was a mistake, because on the next pitch Mele thumped his three-run homer into the stands in left.

Two were out in the Tigers' seventh and Marrero was pitching two-hit ball, when he lapsed to the point of walking Groth. That's when Robinson whipped into what is laughingly called Chico's fast ball and banged it into the right-field seats.

From that point, though, Chico was pretty tough. In fact, he didn't let another Tiger get to first base.

IN SHORT... Pitcher Frank Quinn took the Chattanooga choo-choo tonight. The Nats' sent the former Yale star to their farm club on option... It was agreeable with Quinn who knows the need of more seasoning, and is recovering from a sore arm anyway... Eddie Yost has been specializing in Sunday home runs. Three of his four to date have been on the sabbath... Bucky Harris likes his pitching position at this moment, with the availability of Ray Scarborough and Sid Hudson for tomorrow's and Tuesday's games here... Scarborough will face Hal Newhouser.

Reds' Homers Too Much for Dodgers, 10-9

Brooklyn, May 21 (AP)—Home runs by Virgil Stallcup, Johnny Wyrostek, Grady Hatton and Danny Litwhiler sparked the Cincinnati Reds to a 10-9 triumph over the league-leading Brooklyn Dodgers today.

Litwhiler belted his as a pinch hitter with two on in the eighth inning to win the game. Herm Wehmeier staggered all the way for the Reds.

The victory ended Brooklyn's six-game winning streak and Cincinnati's losing streak.

DiMaggio Poles Two Home Runs In Opener

Cleveland, May 21 (AP)—The big bats of the New York Yankees boomed out a total of 34 hits today as the New Yorks twice defeated the Cleveland Indians, 14-5 and 12-4, before 79,570 fans. Joe DiMaggio had two homers, one with the bases loaded in the opening clash, and drove in three runs.

The crowd was the third largest ever to see an American League game. Cleveland and Philadelphia drew 82,781 here on June 20, 1948, for the record and 81,841 saw New York and Boston play in New York on May 30, 1938.

The victory was the sixth straight for the first place Yankees and it gave them a 2 1/2-game margin over the Detroit Tigers.

In the opener, the Bombers got behind Ed Lopat's nine-hit hurling to pound 15 safeties off four Indian hurlers. DiMaggio hit his grand-slam homer in the second inning and connected for another circuit-clout in the fifth with none on. He was credited with driving in another run in the sixth when he was walked with the bases loaded.

The second contest saw the Yankees score a single run in every inning except the first two, when they were scoreless, and the last, when six men crossed the plate. Nineteen hits zoomed out of the offerings of four Tribe hurlers.

Defending Champion Prince Georges Upset by Baltimore for Title

THE WASHINGTON POST
Monday, May 22, 1950 15

Titone's dog, Arena, seems to take a dim view of Cooper's chances of beating the Brooklyn invader.

Maryland Dodgers Win 3d Straight, 6-4

The Maryland Dodgers won their third straight Prince Georges Suburban League game yesterday, beating Rhode Island av. Merchants, 6-4.

In other league games, another three-game winner, Snug Harbor, thumped Ahl Brothers, 12-4; Lee's Tavern beat Greenbelt, 8-4, and Mount Rainier shut out Prince Georges A. C., 2-0.

Cooper Out To End Tie With Titone

An old feud between two youngsters bobs up again at Griffith Stadium tonight with Featherweights Jimmy Cooper and Charlie Titone banging away at each other for the fourth time.

The scheduled 10-round in-augurates Washington's outdoor fighting season and a crowd of about 3500 is expected to sit in on the proceedings.

The Cooper-Titone series is as even as possible. Cooper, the local better, holds one victory—by a split decision; Titone, the former Seabee from Brooklyn, owns another triumph—a knock-out, and their third fight ended in a draw.

Series Is Even
All three bouts, staged at the Turner's Arena proving grounds, were sizzlers, and there's nothing to indicate that tonight's fourth meeting between the two won't follow script.

The boys may be shooting for something more than just a payday. There's an outside chance of the winner being pitted against Featherweight Boss Willie Pep in August. At least, Matchmaker Gabe Mendez, who's responsible for tonight's show, says he has Pep's word for an appearance here.

As names, Cooper and Titone don't command too much respect, but as fighters the two busy boys have come through with three crackerjack performances. Neither is listed in the top 10 of the 126-pound class, but the name of the winner will grace that list in the next quarterly National Boxing Association ratings, according to Col. Heine Miller, NBA executive Smith Heads Prelims Backing up the main bout, which needs little support, is an eight-round semiwindup which finds Gene Smith, the hot shot local Golden Gloves graduate, going after his eleventh straight pro win. His opponent is Nick Darby, a rugged New York club fighter. Lightweight Pat Thomas and Eddie Gilchrist, both local, square off in a five while three four-rounders are also docketed. Bell time for the first prelim is 8:45. There will be no television or broadcast.

ploives through South Amboy rather than have it remain in box-cars in congested East Coast rail yards pending rerouting to another explosive-loading facility," O'Neill said.

Most of today's church services in this waterfront city of 10,000 persons, 21 miles southwest of New York City, were held on lawns outside the battered, boarded-up churches. It was warm and sunny, the first spring-like day since the drizzling rains of Friday night's "aster."

Msgr. Francis J. Sullivan told worshippers gathered on the lawn outside St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church that "services this morning are services of thanksgiving. Thanks is due to the almighty God that the disaster was not worse."

At Christ Episcopal Church, the Rev. Harry S. Heyrich told his congregation that what had happened to their town was "a frightening example of the futility of international bickering which might lead to war."

The disaster, he said, should serve as "a good argument against all this talk about war and preparing for war." Scattered throughout the congregation were many of the more than 300 injured still swathed in bandages.

On the waterfront where the blast occurred, Army men with mine detectors completed the clearing of scattered bits of munitions which had rained onto the area in the explosion. Then rescue workers went in for a close search for possibly more of the victims, but no whole bodies were found. Frank Kurzawa, the Middlesex County coroner, said there were only a few torn limbs.

An Army demolition squad this afternoon set off some loose explosive in the blast area to dispose of it. It was part of the cleanup program and was carefully controlled. There was no new fire in the area, police headquarters said.

Detective Capt. Walter Simpson of the county prosecutor's office said he was satisfied that not another whole body would be found. He wrote off the death toll at an official 27—four bodies recovered, one of them mangled beyond recognition, and the 23 others missing.

Troops still patrolled the town today, and State police maintained a tight ring around the city to keep out sightseers. Nobody was allowed into South Amboy except on official business.

The repair process went on quietly. Bulldozers were brought in to help in the larger clearing-up jobs, and carpenters and glaziers were at a premium throughout town.

Insurance men set up a claims office at the South Amboy Tennis Club, and said they expected to pay out about four million dollars to policy holders. Municipal officials said the total damage would run probably to about 20 million dollars.

Meanwhile, the Coast Guard's official board of inquiry scheduled a new session Monday in New York City in an attempt to determine the cause of the waterfront blast. An initial hearing had been held here yesterday. The investigators questioned the lone survivor from among the group that had been working on the wharf when the munitions blew up. He was Austin Stottle of South Amboy. He said he just didn't know what had happened.

The men has been loading the munitions from a railroad train onto four barges. The cargo was to be shuttled to the Flying Clipper, a ship of the Isbrandtsen Co., which was waiting in Lower New York Bay.

Admiral O'Neill said there was widespread opposition to the Coast Guard order limiting the shipment of explosives.

City Is 900 Years Old

Cuzco, founded 900 years ago by the first of the great Incas, was the capital of a vast Indian empire which endured until the Spanish Conquistadors defeated the last of the Incas in 1533 and laid the foundations of modern Peru.

Many of the city's buildings still boast the massive stone walls of Inca architecture, but most newer structures are made of comparatively fragile adobe brick.

The city is the trade hub of a vast region in southeastern Peru, and the capital of the province bearing the same name.

Faithful Rejoice In Costa Rica as Virgin Reappears

San Jose, Costa Rica, May 21 (AP).—Devout Catholics rejoiced today for the recovered Virgin of Los Angeles, a black rock statue revered as the patroness of Costa Rica, which disappeared nine days ago and mysteriously reappeared yesterday.

Church bells rang out the news of the reappearance and the faithful thronged the streets in celebration. Archbishop Victor Manuel Sanabria and other church and government officials hurried to Cartago, 20 miles southeast of San Jose, to view the image. At midnight last night, a solemn mass was celebrated at the basilica. The image is about 7 inches high.

Hahn, executive director, Transportation; John A. Brennan, executive director, Finance; Frederick C. Cornwell, executive director, Facilities; C. C. Garner, Chief Inspector, and Frank J. Delany, Solicitor.

At Interior's Indian Affairs, Edwin J. Utz has been appointed assistant commissioner. He has been chief of the land use and settlement division, Bureau of Reclamation. Edwin E. Ferguson has been appointed chief counsel of the bureau. He was formerly with Atomic Energy.

The Washington chapter of the American Society for Public Administration has elected James Mitchell, Civil Service Commissioner, president; Leonard F. C. Reichle, of Atomic Energy, and Carl Tiller, Budget Bureau, vice presidents; Kenneth N. Clark, International Monetary Fund, and Karl Stromsen, Interior, senior councilors, and Edward Preston, Treasury, and Dorcas Jones, League of Women Voters, junior councilors.

MEETINGS: The 30th anniversary of the signing of the Civil Service Retirement Act will be celebrated tonight at 7:30 in the Interior Auditorium. Members of Congress and agency officials will speak. You're invited... A conference on the Federal employee health program will be held Wednesday from 1:45 to 3:15 p.m. in the General Services Administration. The views of the White House, Congress, and agencies on the health program will be expressed.

The House Appropriations Committee has approved funds for the Bureau of Engraving and Printing to make retroactive pay raises to its skilled and clerical-mechanical employees. The workers won't get the money, however, until the bill is signed into law.

JOBS: In all the unfortunate turmoil and confusion in Government here over the budget and job outlook, there is one agency that will be hiring up to 5500 additional employees very soon. That's the Census Bureau. These jobs are due to be filled by persons who passed the recent Census clerk exams. However, if any big layoff goes through as now threatened, many of these jobs may be set aside for permanent employees who would be willing to take them.

BUDGET LAMENT
So the big Appropriation bill meets its annual delay. And the servants of the Nation soon must work without their pay.

Shed a tear for Civil Service—All its funds are nearly spent. Folks in Government are nervous. And concerned about the rent. Those who serve will stand, all waiting. Filed with foul financial fear, While the Congress keeps debating—Must this happen every year?

Uncle Sam, O Great Employer: Kinder be, and end this drivell. For the love of Mike and Moyer, Can't your Service be more Civil?

Home Is the Wanderer...

SUNDAY STROLLER—Yesterday's ideal weather got the best of 2-year-old Gwendy Moren Aaronson. Put upstairs for a nap by her mother, Mrs. Jacob Aaronson, 4912 3d st. nw., Gwendy decided the great outdoors was for her. Downstairs and out of the house she went, no one else the wiser. Several hours later she was found by police in the 4800 block of New Hampshire ave. nw., and taken to the Women's Bureau, where she's shown playing with paper stapler. Meantime, mother missed her and called police, who were ready with the news Gwendy was safe.

2000 Attend Annex Debut At Sanitarium

$1,250,000 Six-Story Addition Is Opened At Takoma Park, Md.

More than 2000 persons attended the exercises marking opening of the new $1,250,000 six-story Washington Sanitarium and Hospital 146-bed annex yesterday in Takoma Park, Md.

State Senator Roy Tasso Davis and Elder J. Lamar McElhany, world president of the general conference of Seventh-day Adventists, were principal speakers. Senator Davis said he had met Adventist doctors and nurses in the highways and the byways of the world ministering to "those in out-of-the-way places, to those in the backlands, the mountains and the valleys."

Elder McElhany paid tribute to the staff and workers for the growth of the institution in years of service and pointed out that medical services are an adjunct to gospel work in all parts of the world.

Among those on the platform were Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), Frederick P. Lee, president of the Montgomery County Council; Mayor Ross Beville of Takoma Park, William E. Nelson, chairman of the sanitarium board; W. B. Ochs, vice president of the general conference, and Dr. Theodore Flaiz, director of the medical department.

J. H. Nies, manager of the hospital, a Seventh-day Adventist institution, said the old annex may be used for convalescents not in need of constant medical attention. Unlike many hospitals, the addition has a central kitchen on the ground floor. Food will be placed in trays on a moving belt leading to a dumbwaiter which stops at all floors.

The annex will have 78 beds for surgical cases, 35 beds for medical cases, and 33 beds for obstetrical use. There will be 86 private rooms, 18 two-patient rooms and six four-patient rooms.

Rates have been set at $10 a day for private rooms, $9 a day for semiprivate rooms and $8 a day for four-patient rooms.

Weather Acts As It Should Act—At Last

The return of warm spring weather to the District will continue today—in fact, it's due to improve.

The Weather Bureau called for a sunny day with a high about 78 degrees. Yesterday's top was 74 at 2:40 p.m. The predicted overnight low will be about 50 compared to yesterday's low of 46 at 5:40 a.m.

Surprisingly enough for a nice Sunday in May, there were no traffic jams anywhere yesterday, police said. There was, however, something of a morning rush at the public golf course in Rock Creek Park. "Just about normal" were the crowds at the Capital's monuments, but at the Zoo it was a "right good attendance" of 50,000.

GI Trade Schools Hit By Union

The Trade Unionist, official organ of the Washington Central Labor Union, yesterday blasted veterans trade schools here and the Board of Education for its recent statement approving them.

The weekly newspaper said the 30 or so private schools training veterans under provisions of the GI Bill are (1) turning out many more graduates than the economy can absorb, and (2) providing inadequate training.

Similar complaints prompted the District Commissioners last summer to launch an investigation of these schools. As part of the study they asked for a report from the Board of Education which must initially approve them. Last week the board gave the schools blanket approval, calling their work "highly successful and beneficial to veterans."

The article stated it costs the Government $15,000 to place one graduate of the GI trade schools because only one person in 20 finds work in a job for which he trained. As an example of how it claims the schools are flooding the labor market, the article picked the trade of tilesetter. Washington normally provides work for about 125, it stated. But one tilesetting school here has already turned out that many graduates, is now training 150 and will probably train 200 more, the paper said.

The Commissioners have received a report from their investigating committee, but have not acted on it because some committee members said they were not consulted when it was prepared.

World Trade Week to Open Here Today

The Washington Board of Trade will observe World Trade Week this week with its second annual exhibit of foreign wares in the Department of Commerce building lobby and corridors.

Joining the exhibit with home made goods will be Ceylon, Norway, Turkey, Egypt, Finland, Italy, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg, Pakistan, Austria, Ireland and Israel. The show will run from today through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne of Norway will speak at a formal opening program which will begin at noon today at the main entrance of the Commerce building.

Other speakers will include Secretary of Commerce Sawyer and Thornton W. Owen, president of the Board of Trade. Jennings Randolph, chairman of the board's World Trade Committee, will preside at the opening.

Leaders Join In 'American Day' Rites

Tolerance in U. S.
Hailed by Guill;
Parade Will Open
Celebration Today

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

On the eve of I Am an American Day a successful Republican from Texas last night expressed his gratitude for the American principle of tolerance for "honest disagreement."

The beneficiary of that tolerance is Ben H. Guill, whose recent election to the House of Representatives made him the first Republican Congressman from the Lone Star State in 24 years.

Guill spoke at an I Am an American Day banquet in the Terrace Room at National Airport.

The banquet was the opening event in the annual affair which will reach its climax this afternoon with Vice President Alben W. Barkley joining a formal celebration on the east steps of the Capitol.

"Such a situation as I find myself in today could not exist to the same degree in any other country in the world," Guill said. "In more than half the countries of the world it could not exist in any degree whatsoever."

"It is our particularly American tradition to respect the rights and human dignity of those who disagree with us," Guill declared.

And, the freshman Congressman added, he was especially grateful that this "basic element in our American democracy, is part and parcel of the way of life on Capitol Hill."

Other speakers included Representative Wayne N. Aspinall (D., Colo.), and Watson B. Miller, commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Col. Waldron E. Leonard, chairman of the celebration, presided. Today's ceremonies will begin at 3:50 p.m. with a parade of "Americans in Revue," across the Capitol Plaza.

After a musical program by the Marine Band and the Sesquicentennial Chorus, movie actor Robert Young is scheduled to take over as master of ceremonies.

Among the notables on the program besides the Vice President, will be Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman and Dr. Ralph J. Bunche.

A special feature will be a salute to the flag by Dace Epermanis, a 12-year-old Latvian girl who is the 150,000th displaced person to enter the United States.

J. Russell Wiggins, managing editor of The Washington Post, will introduce foreign representatives of the State Department's information and educational exchange program, and Miller will introduce participants in the President's Conference on Citizenship.

The Mills Brothers, Kay DeWitt, Lucille Manners, and Marine Corps drill platoon also will participate.

El Capitan and his gypsy girls will give a program of songs and dances at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday at Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, 11th and H sts. ne.

Thomas Fitch Retires From Government

Thomas F. Fitch, the man who has made a career out of staying in the background, yesterday reluctantly emerged for a few minutes of limelight.

The occasion was his retirement from the Federal Government after a total service of 42 years and 11 months—13 years of which was spent in the State Department.

Under the title of special adviser to the director, Office of Consular Affairs, Fitch has quietly and anonymously smoothed the way for hundreds of dignitaries coming to the United States.

Had Part in Royal Visit
Before this, Fitch was special agent in charge of the Department's New York office, where he helped manage the visit of the King and Queen of England in 1939.

This task gave him satisfaction "in the feeling of responsibility," but it had its nerve-racking moments, too. As he watched the royal train cross the border at Niagara Falls, for instance, or as he stood with the thousands assembled on the American side, wondering whether the security measures had eliminated all cranks.

At the last minute, Fitch did spot a man standing in the railroad station mulling over a Bible. He quickly hustled him off the scene. During this time, railroad officials were coming up to him asking whether it was all right to move trains in and out of the station, military men were asking about proper protocol and placement, and Fitch was worrying.

Made President Wait
Directed to make the visits move smoothly, once he was asked to bring about a delay. It seems the President of the United States had an appointment with a foreign dignitary and was running behind in his schedule.

Without a moment's hesitation, Fitch called an agent accompanying the visitor and arranged for an unexpected delay in air travel "bad weather or something."

A few minutes later, the White House called and gave the order to resume according to schedule, but by this time it was too late. That was one time "I kept the President of the United States waiting."

Friday, the high and low of the department gathered in the State Department auditorium to wish the 64-year-old Fitch farewell. They presented him with a portable typewriter and a leather portfolio, which he carried off to his apartment in the Westchester—and anonymity once more.

J. H. Stevenson Retires;
In U. S. Service 51 Years
A man who knew the Department of Agriculture in its earliest days will retire June 8 after 51 years.

He is Joseph H. Stevenson, artist and chief of illustrations in the department's division of publications. Stevenson was born in Des Moines, Iowa, where his father was a close friend of a member of the Iowa Legislature, James Wilson.

Later the Stevensons moved to Kansas, but the friendship continued. When Wilson was named the fourth Secretary of Agriculture in 1897, eight years after the department was formed, he gave young Stevenson a job as messenger. Later he took an examination for draftsman. One of his first jobs was to make architectural drawings for the department's exhibit at the Paris Exposition of 1900. His job paid $40 a month.

Stevenson worked on the first motion picture experiments of the department. One of his first assignments was to film Orville Wright flying his crude biplane from Fort Myer to Shooters' Hill in Alexandria, where the Masonic Memorial now stands. Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson reside at 1206 Orchard st., Alexandria.

Carbon Monoxide
Russell C. Buddington, 34, of 137 13th st. ne., a dairy truck driver, was found dead of carbon monoxide gas poisoning yesterday in his parked car at 55th and W sts., Braddock Park, Md.

Buddington was seated in the rear seat of the sedan. A hose had been connected to the exhaust and carried through a front window vent into the car. The ignition was turned on but the motor was not running when he was found about 8 a.m. by William Bryant, 4702 Bennett ave., Braddock Park.

Bryant observed the hose leading into the window as he rode past on his way to work and stopped to investigate. He called Prince Georges County police from the Upper Marlboro station. Buddington was pronounced dead by Dr. James I. Boyd, county medical examiner, who issued a certificate of death by suicide.

FBI Guard
A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday by Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg, Deputy District Coroner, in the death of George F. Kernath, a Public Buildings Administration guard.

He died at 12:25 a.m. yesterday at Emergency Hospital, after being found two hours earlier, a bullet wound in his head and his pistol by his side. The shooting took place in a guard room at the Agriculture Department.

Four Suicides Reported in District Area

2 Men Shoot Selves;
One Uses Gas; Woman
Jumps Under Train

Deaths of three persons in Prince Georges County and one in the District were ruled suicides yesterday by investigating authorities. Two of the deaths were by shooting, one by a jump in front of a train, and one by carbon monoxide gas from an automobile exhaust.

Thomas R. Dwyer, 48, of 8314 Potomac ave., College Park, Md., died in his son's bedroom in his home as result of a revolver shot in the right temple. He was a locksmith for the Postoffice Department shops at 5th and W sts. ne.

Police said the victim wrapped a towel around his head before the shooting. Relatives told them he had been despondent over poor health. His son, Charles Dwyer, was in another room on the second floor and his wife was on the first floor of the home at the time of the shooting.

Also Leaves Sister
He also is survived by a sister, Miss Olive Dwyer, who lives with Mr. Dwyer's family. The body was taken to the Gash funeral home, Hyattsville, where Dr. John T. Maloney, a county medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Identity of the woman who was killed by a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad passenger train at Riverdale, Md., Saturday night was established last night by police.

She was identified as Mrs. Martha Jane Peck, 63, of 4913 Somerset rd., Riverdale, Md., by her son and daughter-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Watts, Jr., of 5416 Powhatan st., Riverdale, Md.

The relatives said Mrs. Peck had been despondent since the death of her second husband, Henry H. Peck, last September.

Dr. John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner, issued a certificate of death by suicide. Witnesses told Detective Richard Pearson of the Prince Georges County police and Riverdale Town Policeman C. R. Weaver, who investigated the death, that Mrs. Peck threw herself in front of the train.

Pearson had seen the woman walking up and down on the station platform at Riverdale for more than half an hour, but thought she was waiting for a passenger train, as several freight trains passed while she waited.

Police were informed Kernath had been in ill health and was hospitalized May 11 at Mount Alto Hospital. They said he had no relatives in the Washington area.

Man Tells Police He Committed 1921 Murder

Case of Georgia
Death Reopened
As Result of His Statement Here

Investigation of a mysterious death in Georgia in 1921 was revived yesterday when a man walked into Washington police headquarters and said he murdered a man in that year.

Harris L. Duke, who said he is an itinerant painter, explained he wanted to rid himself of worry about the case.

Victim, according to Duke, was Jordan Rowe who, Duke said, was "too friendly" with Mrs. Duke while he was in the Navy. Duke said he hit Rowe over the head with a rock, found he was dead, and threw his body into the Flint River.

Found in River
Chief of Police Frank Sims, of Thomaston, Ga., told The Washington Post that Rowe's body was pulled from the Flint River in 1921.

"The doctor who examined him at that time," Chief Sims said, "found some marks on his head that looked like violence. He wanted to do an autopsy, but Rowe's folks wouldn't permit it. Rowe was buried without an autopsy."

As result of notice by Washington police, Chief Sims and Deputy Sheriff G. T. Gill of Upson County spent the day on the case and last night said the Georgia State Bureau of Investigation will enter the inquiry today. Chief Sims said authorities will decide later about coming to Washington to question Duke.

"There are a lot of people who were around and knew about the case then that are dead now," Chief Sims said. "But the doctor who examined Rowe at that time is still around, though we weren't able to contact him today."

Lots of Digging
"We're going to dig to the bottom of this thing, no matter how hard it is, and we'll really have to do some digging."

Duke was taken to M. J. Mahoney, desk lieutenant in the detective bureau, and told him he went to Thomaston after his Navy discharge in 1921. He learned, he told Mahoney, that Rowe was "too friendly" with Mrs. Duke. A violent argument ensued with Rowe, he said, and the slugging occurred. Then, he said, he threw the body in the river.

Duke said he fled immediately and has been a "hopscoatching" around the country ever since. He said he has been in Washington about a year and lived recently at 26 18th st. se. He was booked on an open charge and placed in the central cell block.

About noon yesterday, he complained of pains in his head, and was transferred to Gallinger Hospital for observation. Officials there said last night he was in "fair" condition.

Dealers Seek Rental Space At Airport

Washington National Airport has more prospective tenants than it can handle, Bennett H. Griffin, airport director for the CAA, said yesterday.

Applications for the 5000 square feet of space now available in the new extension of the Administration-Terminal Building have been pouring in from eager concessionaires. The entire addition is expected to be completed by December 31.

These applications must be evaluated on their "service to the public" passing through the terminal each day. It already has been decided that a branch bank and drug store will be opened.

Other facilities under consideration are a valet shop, beauty shop, men's and women's wear shops.

Cafritz Garden Party Sticks to the Shade

By Marie McNair

MR. AND MRS. MORRIS CAFRITZ gave a garden party yesterday afternoon but nobody went into the garden. Instead guests clustered on the broad terrace shaded by a pair of giant old trees and set out with white garden tables and chairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Cafritz stayed indoors to receive, Gwen Cafritz in a long off-shoulder gown of white organza splashed with pale yellow and blue flowers, the full skirt caught into a low drape just above her heels. A turquoise and diamond necklace sparkled at her throat.

First arrivals were Mrs. George Barnett and Mrs. Harold Walker.

Took Her Turn

At Tea Table

MME. MORGENSTIERNE in navy blue silk suit and little white hat took her turn at the tea table. Mrs. Harold Burton in cafe au lait lace and brimmed blue straw hat served coffee, and also at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Mrs. Fred Vinson, Mrs. Clifton Cates, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mrs. Owen Brewster in black and white print and wide red hat, Mrs. Edward H. Foley, Mrs. Francis Matthews, Mrs. George Malone and Mrs. Clark Clifford.

In a group I saw Col. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle and with them the former Princess Hohenlohe with Morton Downey of radio fame. Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt were there, she in dark blue and white print; and so were the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Dillon; the Chilean Ambassador, Felix Nieto del Rio; Senator and Mrs. Clinton Anderson, Mrs. Walter George, the Leslie Biffles, Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark, and James Cromwell.

Then—Gen. and Mrs. Virgil Peterson, the only ones to venture as far away as the swimming pool; Mrs. Eric Johnson and her daughter, Harriet; goodlooking Raymond Hasebrouck; the Kurt Hetzels; Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas MacArthur 2d, and Mrs. Parker West who took charge of the ladies at the tea table.

Admired View

From the Terrace

ASSISTANT Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, and Mrs. Miller in slim black with a white hat tied with a purple veil, admired the view with the spires of Georgetown University in the foreground, and the Pentagon looking like a cracker box far away.

Saw Mrs. Eugene Carusi and Mrs. Lauriston Hardin together, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Charles Brannan. Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, Mrs. Max Gardner. Chatted with Bertha Joseph, Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin, Fred Roy, and Mrs. Eugene Millikin, who said the Senator was at that moment flying in to Washington.

Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, the Royce Powells, Mrs. Harry G. Meem, Mrs. George Thorpe and Mrs. John Allan Dougherty together; Judge and Mrs. George Neilson, the Paul Porters, Mrs. Alex Legare, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim who had been first to Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings' luncheon at Oakington, their Maryland home.

And Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Bob Rosenberg and his missus; Mr. and Mrs. Constantine de Stackelberg, the James Parks, Mrs. Rowan Shevlin and Pen Turner.

At Woodlawn

Setting Old But the Cast Was Modern

THE SETTING was the same as it might have been 150 years ago. But the cast of characters were strictly 20th Century at George Williams' luncheon yesterday at historic Woodlawn.

The gracious old manor three miles below Mount Vernon, which George Washington presented to Nellie Custis Lewis, his adopted daughter, is being restored by the Woodlawn Foundation. And yesterday's host has been one of the principal workers in the cause, having furnished the banquet dining room through a loan from his own collection of antiques.

Mr. Williams' luncheon was in honor of Mrs. Perle Mesta, our Minister to Luxembourg, who is returning shortly to her post. The 35 guests, lunched from a priories set of Chamberlain Royal Worcester china loaned by Mrs. A. Bradley of Alexandria. One hundred and fifty pieces in number, the china was made in the year 1730 for the Duke of Argyle.

The Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Dillon were among the luncheon guests, and the company also included Justice and Mrs. Tom Clark, Deputy Undersecretary of State and Mrs. John Peurifoy, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford, former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, former Senator Henry Ashhurst, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Hough-telling, Leander McCormick-Goodhart, Mr. and Mrs. John Horton and Rixey Smith.

After luncheon there was time before starting back to town to tour the house; to stroll through the gardens which overlook the Potomac. The group admired a recent acquisition—a pastel portrait by John Sharples of the original hostess at Woodlawn, daughter of the late Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury. They saw also a Rembrandt Peale portrait of General Washington on loan from Mount Vernon.

WOODLAWN, one of Virginia's historic shrines, was the unusual setting for a party yesterday honoring Mrs. Perle Mesta. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Horton, photographed as they sat before a mantelpiece given to Nellie Custis Lewis, Woodlawn's original hostess, by the Marquis de Lafayette.

PAUSING on the sunny east steps of Woodlawn as they arrived at yesterday's luncheon were Mrs. John Peurifoy, Miss Carolyn Nash, and Mr. Peurifoy, deputy Under Secretary of State.

A Perplexed Divorcee Is Advised She Sheds Her Marriage Name When She Takes the Nuptial Plunge Again

DEAR ANNE:
I am a divorcee and expect to marry again soon. Can you advise me on the proper use of names?

For example, say my maiden name was Mary Folger, my first husband's name was Randall, and husband-to-be is named Garrett. On remarriage, will my name, for social as well as legal purposes, be Mary Folger Garrett or Mary Randall Garrett? Also, are middle names always spelled out on wedding announcements or can initials be used? M. R., Washington.

After your second marriage, you would drop the name of your divorced husband, becoming Mary Folger Garrett.

Yes, middle names should be spelled out on the wedding announcements. This is considered the correct form.

DEAR ANNE:
The woman who asked advice on bleaching her unpainted draining board might find Spar varnish as much a boon as I did with a similar sink area at one time.

If she'll just varnish her drain board every 3 or 4 months, as directed on the can, she'll find the wood retains a clear even color and is clean and water resistant. I found I could set very hot pans on the varnished surface—or use scouring powder or bleaches—with no ill effects. H. S., Washington.

PETUNIA!

I hustled to the kitchen
And I blushed a Shocking Pink
To see my guests examining
My stained and yellow sink!

But if those stains are reasonably recent, Petunia, you can get rid of them. Put 3 folds of paper toweling in the sink, pour strong household bleach in, and let stand 15 minutes... then scrub with soap powder.

Bishop-Bracken

DEAR ANNE:
I would appreciate knowing whether it is necessary for the next of kin at a funeral (for example, grown daughters) to wear all black, or whether dark blue or gray with black accessories is not out of place, and commonly used.

E. B. C., Washington.

Although members of the family once shrouded themselves in black veils and wore black clothing, even stockings, at the funeral, this is not customary now. You can wear black, dark blue, gray, brown—any sober color you prefer.

DEAR ANNE:
Can you tell me if there is any organization interested in receiving used sewing patterns? I seldom have any interest in using patterns more than once, and I should be glad to give them away since they could be re-used very easily.

Helen E. Teir,

The Friends' Service Committee here will be very pleased to receive a donation of used patterns. This group maintains a sewing room where clothes are made over for shipment to the destitute peoples of Europe. You can mail your package of patterns to Sarah B. Kearney, Quaker Clothing Relief, 2111 Florida ave. nw.

PLANS for a forthcoming fashion show benefit for the D. C. Cancer Society are being made by Mrs. Charles F. Brannan (left), chairman of patronesses; Mrs. August Boas, chairman of tickets; and Mrs. James E. MacPherson, general chairman. The show will be presented in the Windsor Park Hotel on June 7 at 1 p. m., with fashions by Garfinckel's.

Jobe' Says...

The "good old summertime" is a gay old tune in the fashion world. Designers always seem more inspired by the country and the seaside than by conventional city activities.

Take New Personality With Summer Clothes

It seems to me that this year, summer clothes are gayer and more individual than ever. It gives you a chance to express yourself, or even to take on a whole new personality.

Peron Would Call Him a Descamisado

No fancy-dan in togs am I... Quite modestly I'm dressed... A bargain shirt supports my tie... And covers up my chest... But though sartorially I lag... I'm reckless at the track... I lose my shirt on some old nag... And never get it back.

HEAD START FOR NEXT YEAR?

A nice fresh streamer on the window of a drug store at 17th and the Avenue Saturday announced that Mother's Day cards were available inside.

SPEEBSA, INC.

Tonight at 8, in the National Press Club auditorium, there will be a free concert for members and guests of the Press Club and the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, Inc.

If it's anything like previous affairs featuring the barbershoppers, it won't break up until the wee hours.

As a matter of fact, last year

some of the best singing was done in the downstairs lobby. One quartet, on the way out, discovered that "the acoustics are simply wonderful in the lobby."

I guess it all depends on the old saw: "How many quarts in a quartet?"

SUGGESTION BOX

"The other morning," writes John Carter, "it took me an hour and 20 minutes to drive from my home in Arlington to the Munitions Building—a trip that usually takes 20 minutes."

"The delay was caused by two cars which had locked bumpers on Memorial Bridge. But while northbound traffic was inching forward, the light southbound traffic zipped along in one lane, and two southbound lanes were idle."

"In other sections of the country, a variable number of lanes may be used, according to the traffic load. Lights, controlled by policemen on duty, determine how many lanes shall be assigned to each direction. If the evening rush reverses the pattern of the morning rush, the policeman adjusts his light signals accordingly."

"I think that the same system employed here on such arteries as Memorial Bridge would be a tremendous help in moving traffic more efficiently."

The other one is just east of Union Station, between E and F sts. ne. ... If I write this column long enough, I'll know how to find my way around town...

The last time Post Reporter Edward T. Follard covered a story at the State Department, one of the guards asked: "Why don't you newspaper fellows start a campaign to get us a big sign for this building, so that folks will know what it is?"

I'm against it. I don't want to be the only addlepate in town who still thinks of the building next to the White House when somebody mentions "State Department."

Army Nerve Gas Tests Reported

By Drew Pearson

A sensational story was flashed out of Detroit recently that the Army has developed a magic nerve gas which destroys the will to resist and makes war painless. The story grew out of a remark by Maj. Gen. Anthony MacAuliffe, chief of the Army Chemical Corps who happened to mention nerve gases at the American Chemical Society's annual meeting in Detroit. The sensational details about making war painless, however, were supplied by an imaginative reporter.

The facts about the Army's new nerve gases are sensational, all right, but exactly opposite to what the press reported. The gases do not cause a gentle sleep and do not pave the way for bloodless conquest. Instead, they drive men mad, turn them into raging lunatics before killing them.

The Army's experiments have been based on two nerve gases developed by the Germans and still known by their German names—Tabun and Sarin. These are fiendishly lethal gases, depending upon the dose. A small dose will cause severe headache, nausea and chest congestion. A few extra whiffs will attack the optic nerve and cause blindness, then degenerate vital brain cells, until the victim loses his sanity. Homicidal tendencies are supposed to result.

Gas masks are no protection from Tabun and Sarin, which seep into the body through the skin pores. Protective clothing has been developed, however, that will help.

Russians Have Secret
The Army is now using goats, rabbits and rats to experiment with Tabun and Sarin at Dugway proving ground in the barren Utah desert. The gases are invisible and difficult to detect, though Army scientists who have gotten a whiff of escaping Tabun say it smells faintly like "juicy fruit" chewing gum.

The Germans turned over 200-pound and 500-pound Tabun gas bombs to the United States Army after VE-Day—bombs which had never been used for fear of retaliation—though captured German documents show that Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels urged that Hitler resort to Tabun in the last, desperate days.

Inasmuch as the Russians took over German war secrets, it is safe to assume that Russians have been experimenting with Tabun and Sarin in the same way we are doing.

Harry's Whistle-Stop
Whether you agree with President Truman or not, any fair-minded political observer will agree that when Harry gets out among the folks, it does something both for him and for them.

He is like Antaeus who got his strength every time he was thrown to earth, and whom Hercules could not vanquish until he held him over his head away from the earth.

Likewise Harry Truman is strongest when he gets away from his palace guard of cronies and sticks close to the earthy people from whom he came and to whom he belongs. They give him almost a spiritual lift, and he in turn gives them a political lift as far as his popularity and the Democratic party are concerned.

This, of course, is something for the Republicans to worry about. However, in these days of new and fiendish poison gases, there is also something else for all of us to worry about—namely, the wave of neutrality that is sweeping Western Europe.

Carefully nurtured by the Communist Party and by the Moscow radio, many Europeans have come to believe that the U. S. A. is the world's worst warmonger and that Western Europe is foolish to get in the middle of a clash between the U. S. A. and the U. S. S. R.

So Here Is a Suggestion: President Truman, a down-to-earth, likable gentleman, who goes over great with the plain people, should go to Europe this fall or summer to make a whistle-stop tour.

If he visited not merely the big capitals, but took a train through the heart of France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, stopping at little stations along the way, he could do a great selling job for his country and a far greater service than touring our own Western States.

And Harry Truman, I predict, giving off-the-cuff, down-to-earth, sincere, straight-from-the-shoulder facts about what the American people have already done for Europe, and the reasons why we have done it, would become the world's No. 1 salesman of democracy and would stymie the Moscow Radio for months to come.
